GRAF CROSSES FRANCE BY NIGHT; WILL REACH HOME HANGAR TODAY

Limoges and Bordeaux See Huge Zeppelin Roaring Through Sky.

SHIP TAKES DIRECT ROUTE TO GERMANY

Atlantic Left Behind, the Craft Travels at Moderate Rate of Speed.

LEHMANN ADOPTS COASTLINE COURSE

Spanish Towns Thrilled by Airship on Arrival From America.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Sept. 4 (A.P.) (Wednesday).—The Graf Zeppelin, at 4 a. m. mid-European time (10 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern standard time), notified the Zeppelin Works it intended to land here between 7 and 8 a. m. (between 1 and 2 a. m. Eastern standard time).

Limoges, France, Wednesday, September 4 (A.P.).—The Graf Zeppelin flew over this city at 2:26 a. m. (8:26 p. m., Tuesday, Eastern standard time).

Limoges is about 110 miles from Bordeaux.

Bordeaux, France, Wednesday, Sept. 4 (A.P.).—The Graf Zeppelin flew over this city at 45 minutes after midnight (6:45 p. m., Tuesday, Eastern standard time).

The cabins were brilliantly lighted as the huge bulk glided gracefully past at a height of about 1,200 feet. All appeared to be going well on board. The nose of the airship was pointed northeastward, apparently making for Lyon or Djion.

500 Miles From Home.

At this point the Graf had only about 500 miles to go to its home port at Friedrichshafen, and if the present rate of speed was maintained it should reach there in about eight hours.

The city had been expecting a glimpse of the airship following reports of its progress along the coast of Spain and the southern shore of the Bay of Biscay. Apparently it left Spain at a point near Santander and picked up the French coast near Bordeaux for this was the first French town to report a sighting.

The pace of the dirigible was moderate and eager watchers had a good view of it during the few minutes it was crossing the city.

The deep drone of the engines brought thousands out of doors to see glittering cabin lights like jewels in the autumn sky.

The weather forecast was for slight cloudy with some thunderstorms and moderate south to southeast winds.

Direct Line Is Taken.

The diagonal course across France selected by Capt. Ernst Lehman was the most direct line for its home port. From here Lyon is 270 miles, and Djion to the northward 320 miles as the crow flies.

Santander, Spain, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The Graf Zeppelin passed over this city this evening.

The weather was stormy over the Bay of Bscay toward the coast of France. As the dirigible cruised over this city its lights shone brilliantly against the dark skies momentarily before they were dimmed by the threatening clouds.

The sea resorts were crowded with persons who cheered as the airship majestically sailed on. Vessels in the harbor pointed their searchlights upward toward the silvery sides of the craft. Before passing out to sea the airship cruised over Magdalena Palace where King Alfonso and Queen Victoria are spending a holiday.

Sighted at Gijon.

Gijon, Spain, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The Graf Zeppelin was sighted from here at 7:42 p. m. (1:41 p. m. E. S. T.) about three kilometers from the coast flying at about 1,000 feet.

Reports of sighting the dirigible at Gijon and Santander showed that the airship had followed the northern coast of Spain after passing Corunna instead of cutting across the Bay of Biscay.

The distance from Corunna to Gijon is about 150 miles and was covered in about two and a half hours. From Gijon to Santander is about 100 miles and it is about the same distance from Santander to the French border.

On Last Lap for Home.

Paris, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Homeward bound after repeating by air, Magellan's historic voyage around the world, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin tonight entered upon the last stage of her third eastward transatlantic flight this year.

With favorable weather conditions in southwestern France, Capt. Ernst Lehmann, commanding the Graf instead of Capt. Hugo Eckener, informed the home works at Friedrichshafen that he expected to cross the

Homans Ties Jones For Medalist Honors

Princeton Boy Turns in 73 Round in Amateur Golf Qualifying.

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

Pebble Beach, Calif., Sept. 3 (A.P.). Somebody must have let loose a few good old-fashioned college cheers before the battle of Pebble Beach began for the national amateur golf championship.

For the second successive day an undergraduate club-swinger jumped out of the pack to give the defending champion, Bobby Jones, a fight for scoring honors. Today bespectacled, deliberate Eugene V. Homans, of Englewood, N. J., and Princeton University, took over the lion taming role from Gibson Dunlap, Los Angeles collegian and sensation of the opening round. After a half gale had swept hopes all over the seaside course, Homans was tied with Jones for the medal and lead in the 36-hole, two-day qualifying test.

Before the wind gathered full force to ruin most prospects of low scoring, Homans finished with 72—73—145. Jones, playing under less favorable conditions, wound up with 70—75—145.

BOBBY JONES.

Fighting gamely in the wake of the Georgian, Dunlap finished with 69—

LOST DERBY FLIER SOUGHT IN DESERT

Maj. Wood's Mechanic, Who Is Found Dazed, Says That Blast Wrecked Plane.

HIT BY BOLT, IS BELIEF

Needles, Calif., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Ward Miller, 25-year-old airplane mechanic, was found wandering in the desert near here today and told a story that hinted of tragedy for the speed race of his companion, Maj. John Wood, 32, president of the Northern Airways, who took off from Los Angeles for Cleveland early Monday.

Tonight men and airplanes were searching the desert for Maj. Wood and his plane.

Miller, who said he believed the pilot had been killed, declared an explosion hurled him from the speeding plane. He told a prospector, who found him dazed and near collapse, that he lapsed into unconsciousness just as he pulled the rip cord of his parachute.

After he regained his senses, Miller said, he found himself prostrate on the desert. Wandering about, he saw bits of the wing of an airplane, but could find no trace of the pilot or other parts of the craft.

Maj. Wood, whose home was in Wausau, Wis., early Monday took off from the Metropolitan Airport, near Los Angeles as the last entrant in the feature race of the national air races, which was won by Lieut. Henry J. Brown, of Cleveland, with a time of 13 hours and 15 minutes.

Wood's plane carried 500 gallons of gasoline for the nonstop flight. The flier, a veteran pilot, had a parachute, but it was believed he might have experienced difficulty in extricating himself from the narrow pilot's cabin.

Needles is about 300 miles east of

LOS ANGELES POLICE ACCUSED IN KILLINGS

Took Bribes in at Least Two Murders, Pay-Off Man Says in Confession.

MEETINGS ARE RELATED

Los Angeles, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Information on alleged pay-offs to police officers in at least two unsolved murder cases was in the hands of State authorities here today.

District attorney's deputies announced that an additional statement had been made by Harry D. Macdonald, confessed bootlegger and pay-off man.

Deputies Percy Hammon and David Clark, investigating Macdonald's charges that more than a score of police officers had taken tribute from him for protection of his illegal business, said, "He gave us leads in the murder cases upon which we now are working."

Macdonald was quoted as describing meetings in his Seventh street camouflaged "bathhouse" of asserted gunmen and police officers, whom he overheard discussing various "unsolved murders." Macdonald told the deputies that names of guilty criminals were frankly mentioned in the conferences, along with the sums they were alleged to have paid police to "beat the rap." Hammon said Macdonald denied ever having been the pay-off man in any murder case, but that "he knows what he himself paid (for bootlegging protection) and we believe can prove that."

Hammon said Macdonald partly corroborated and gave additional information to charges of Zeke Hayes, convict, who told a grand jury that the police received large sums to "square" the $80,000 shold-up of a Pacific National Bank messenger a year ago.

While the district attorney's in-

Senators Resume Battle On New Tariff Bill Today

Democrats and Western Republicans Unite for Bitter Fray.

(Associated Press.)

With one of the oldest party issues—the tariff—to settle once more, the Senate half of the special session will resume work today after a two-and-one-half month recess to complete the emergency legislative program recommended to it by President Hoover.

The House, which started last January formulating the first tariff legislation in seven years and sent the completed measure to the Senate in late May, will not meet until September 23. Then it will adjourn over three-day periods until the Senate sends the bill back to it for adjustment of differences.

The eve of the reconvening of the Senate found the Democrats and Western Republicans organizing to limit the revision to agriculture, or—failing in that—to carry on a vigorous drive to wipe out the proposed increases in industrial import levies and in some instances to reduce existing rates.

Leaders of both groups expressed confidence that they had enough votes practically to rewrite the bill to their liking.

Senator Smoot, of Utah, tariff spokesman for the regular Republicans, said he was ready for the

U. S. WORKERS AIR WOES AND PLEAD FOR AID

Suppression of Appeals in Capital Is Charged at Convention.

WORK CHANGE ASKED FOR ST. ELIZABETHS

Attendants Are Required to Paint Walls, Say Federal Employes.

ENGRAVING BUREAU SITUATION IS SCORED

Shifts and Transfers Could Obviate All Unexpected Furloughs, Claim.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 3.—The convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes today became a forum for the airing of grievances, and the number and variety that tumbled onto the record was truly amazing.

In a resolution introduced by Washington Local 71, it was charged that chief clerks and other executives in the National Capital were deliberately holding up or suppressing appeals made by their subordinates. These appeals are addressed to the Personnel Classification Board, and usually are in the nature of a protest against the allocation of an employe to an undesirable position.

The holding up or suppression of these appeals by division heads, the resolution declared, is a clear violation of a Personnel Classification Board circular which says that "any employe shall have the right to appeal to the board from the allocation of the position which he occupies." Under the regulations, however, the appeal must first go to the employe's superior for recommendation and comment.

Long Delay Cited.

Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the federation, told of one instance where an appeal made by a group of employes was held up for two years. A protest lodged with the Secretary of the Treasury by the federation, she said, finally brought action.

The resolution revealing the situation with regard to appeals was referred to the executive council of the federation, which will do one of two things, seek either a presidential order or a law making mandatory the immediate forwarding to the classification board of all appeals by employes.

A resolution designed to correct a situation in St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington was unanimously adopted. It charged that nurses and attendants in that institution are being made to do work that has nothing to do with their regular duties.

"The attendants," said the resolution, "are called upon to paint walls, ceilings, scrape woodwork, such as floors and furniture and to paint beds and windows."

Patients Slighted, Claim.

Using nurses and attendants for this kind of work, the resolution declares, not only is an usurpation of the duties of regular painters, but prevents the nurses and attendants from giving their time to their patients.

A pathetic situation at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was pictured in a resolution offered by Washington Local 105. It described how, in the last two years, the workers have been forced to take frequent furloughs, with consequent loss of pay.

In many instances, it was charged by Miss McNally and Belle Trouland, the employes receive no warning that they are to be furloughed until they have reported at work in the morning. Some of the employes, they said, come all the way from Maryland and Virginia.

With the introduction of the new small money and the installation of labor saving machinery, Miss McNally said it is inevitable that an adjustment of personnel will occur.

Shifts Are Advocated.

By shifting the women around and through transfer to other bureaus, she said, the furloughs might be avoided. In any event, she declared, there is no reason why employes should be made to report for work before being told that they were not needed for the day.

The resolution also pointed out that the bureau employes get no sick leave. The result is, it was explained, that when an employe is stricken and his annual leave is exhausted, he is held accountable for every day he is away.

The federation indorced the plan of Senator George, of Georgia, to provide pay for the bureau workers when they are on enforced furloughs, and directed the national officers to use their best efforts to obtain sick leave with pay for the workers.

The federation also pledged itself to seek some relief for the employes

MRS. A. T. HERT CHANGES PLAN TO QUIT POST

Question of Successor Influences Decision to Remain.

HOOVER REQUESTED HER CONTINUANCE

Claudius Huston Believed Chosen to Succeed Dr. Work.

CHAIRMAN HONORED DURING VISIT HERE

President Persuades Him to Accept Hospitality of White House.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, of Kentucky, formally withdrew her resignation as vice chairman of the Republican national committee yesterday. That she would do this had been expected for sometime because of the squabble that ensued for her job when her resignation was first announced.

In a telegram to Chairman Work she asked that her resignation not be placed before the committee meeting Monday. Her action, she said, had been requested by President Hoover.

Whether this means that Mrs. Hert is to remain indefinitely as vice chairman is yet to develop. It is exceedingly doubtful that it does. It is very probably the plan that she remain until Mr. Hoover and his new national chairman, Claudius C. Huston, have been able to pacify the pack of ambitious woman who want the job and a successor may be selected without leaving too many broken hearts.

Work Lauds Huston.

Incidentally, Dr. Work virtually confirmed the general understanding upon his arrival in Washington yesterday from the West that Huston would be his successor. He spoke in high terms of him and said that he was convinced a majority of the national committeemen would support Huston. They will, if the President lets it be known that he wants them to, of course.

Dr. Work was the first arrival for the committee meeting next Monday. The announcement that preceded him was that he would stop at Wardman Park Hotel but President Hoover embraced him and insisted that he stay at the White House. There will be cynics who will say that this is the most hospitable treatment the doctor has received since March 4.

The indications are, however, that the President has felt keenly the reports of his neglect of the doctor and has been doing everything within his power to dissipate them or to make up for the neglect if there really was any. The understanding is that his first move in this direction was to try to get Dr. Work to go to Japan as Ambassador, but the doctor is tired and wants to rest.

West Likes Hoover.

There is no indication, either, that the doctor is leaving with any ill feeling. He said yesterday that he found the West well pleased with the administration so far.

Going back to Mrs. Hert, she really wants to retire. She has been wanting to quit her post, in fact, since she was injured by an automobile here several months ago.

When her resignation was first announced the name of Mrs. Worthington Scranton, committee woman from Pennsylvania, loomed large as her likely successor. Weeks passed and outwardly Mrs. Scranton was having no opposition, but other women had apparently been at work and as a result such a squabble developed that it was decided that Mrs. Hart had better not resign just now.

Mrs. Pratt a Candidate.

Mrs. Scranton would make the ideal vice chairman, it is said. She is attractive and has plenty of money, and would not try to nose about too much. Her most serious opponent just now seems to be Representative Ruth B. Pratt, of New York, who is most gracious and also has plenty of money, but admiring writers say of her that she is not the rubber stamp type, that she has a mind of her own. If this is true, and she should receive the appointment, it will be a departure from the way of doing business in the past. The women are getting right cocky though, after the number of votes they polled in the campaign.

The committeewomen meet here Saturday at the Willard Hotel, two days ahead of the men, but with the withdrawal of Mrs. Hert's resignation they will hardly have anything to talk about, not to speak of having nothing to do.

The word is going around now, too, that the meeting of the men is to be just as tame and meaningless. The wiseacres say that arrangements have been made to keep all possible friction out of the meeting, particularly the airing of the grievances of Geor-

U. S. AND BRITAIN VARY ON BUT THREE POINTS IN PARITY, M'DONALD SAYS

British Premier at Geneva Reveals Accord on 17 of 20 Issues.

HE PREDICTS FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT SOON

England Refused to Build Against United States, His "Last Word."

PEACE ON BIG SCALE IS AIM OF DOCUMENT

Present Agreement Is Held Not to Affect General Arms Cut Adversely.

Geneva, Sept. 3 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Only three of the original twenty points at issue between Great Britain and the United States on naval disarmament remain to be settled, but these three are of such paramount importance that disagreement on them can make naval rapprochement worthless, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald declared today in his anxiously awaited address before the League of Nations assembly.

The Labor chief declined to specify the points still to be arranged because of possible embarrassment to President Hoover, but he stated emphatically that Great Britain refused "absolutely to build against the United States," and that he and Hoover were not out for small things but for a "document which will establish peace on a grand scale."

Clarifying Great Britain's attitude toward every important international problem facing it today, MacDonald's speech contained the following high lights:

1. He predicted that the British delegation would be able to announce a final agreement with Washington before the assembly concluded its deliberations.

2. He declared that next week the first Rhineland occupation troops would turn their faces homeward never to return.

3. He characterized the disorders in Palestine as "nothing less than an ordinary political crime" and announced Great Britain would never yield to outbursts of criminality and murder.

Security in Agreements.

Striking a keynote that has found repeated utterance in American circles, MacDonald urged the military and naval experts on the preparatory disarmament commission to realize there is as much security in political agreements as in "regiments of soldiers or fleets of battleships."

He advised the experts not to enter the discussions with the possibility of war uppermost in their minds because no lasting solution can be reached if that is the way the problems are faced.

"Face them on the assumption that the risk of war breaking out is far less than the hope of peace being permanently observed," he said.

"Disarmament should not wait upon peace negotiations," he continued. "Our people will never feel comfortable, our people will never be able to touch common sense, the ordinary, sound, human common sense, until all of us together by cooperative enterprise, have substantially reduced the risks of war.

"And one of the greatest risks is that some of us, all of us, are still too heavily armed."

Reassures Foreign Delegates.

Reassuring the foreign delegates on the nature of the American-British naval conversations, MacDonald said the purpose was the "production of actual definite results" in the way of peace.

"Our special contriution to this and our first contribution must be," he explained, "in the field of naval armaments. It must be recognized by every one who has entered into

More Doctors Resign Gallinger Staff Jobs

Chief Resident Physician and Interne Leave Berths Here.

Two more physicians have joined the exodus from Gallinger Municipal Hospital, which began with the resignation, announced first in The Post, of Dr. Samuel Kahn, chief resident psychiatrist, who suddenly packed his belongings last Saturday afternoon and departed the same evening by automobile to accept the post which he had been offered several months previously as alienist at Sing Sing Prison in New York.

Sunday, Dr. George Gay, chief resident physician, in charge of all medical and surgical activity at Gallinger, likewise severed his connection with the institution and started for Ironton, Mo., where he plans to begin private practice, succeeding his father, who is in poor health. At the same time Dr. John T. Gernon, having completed his year as an interne, also left Gallinger.

In addition to these, one other resident physician in a high post at Gallinger yesterday stated that he is soon to hand in his resignation, al-

STIMSON DISCOUNTS OPTIMISM ON ARMS

Much Ground Yet Remains to Be Covered, Asserts Secretary of State.

SITUATION HAS CHANGED

Premier MacDonald's speech at Geneva yesterday evoked from Secretary of State Stimson, after a conference with President Hoover, another warning against assumption that a final Anglo-American accord is imminent.

"In the opinion of those of us who have been working on it on this side," said the Secretary, "we have been making hopeful progress, but we feel that it will require still a considerable period of hard work on details before an agreement on parity can be arrived at."

Analysis of the MacDonald speech, or such of it as reached here, disclosed nothing more than a prediction of early agreement, with but three of twenty points remaining to be settled, and the declaration that Great Britain "declines absolutely to build against the United States."

This last was not regarded as particularly significant in administration circles, except as it stresses the point that Britain builds against potential European combinations, whereas to the big Navy mind of this side, the British navy is the sole measure of desired strength.

Naval officials understand that President Hoover's and Secretary Stimson's diminished optimism arises from the definite conclusion that the kind of parity agreement possible with the British is much different from what the administration hoped for at the outset of the negotiations.

Last week the President thought it possible to arrive at a parity definition, or yardstick, that would abolish

Four-Alarm Fire Hits Lumber Yard

W. A. H. Church Plant Is Badly Damaged by Flames at Midnight.

Flames which soared high into the sky were sweeping the W. A. H. Church lumber yard on Eighth street, between C and D streets southwest, last midnight. Four alarms had been turned in.

The blaze was plainly visible over the southwest section of the city and could be seen even from Pennsylvania avenue. A large crowd soon collected at the scene of the fire.

A stable full of mules was said to be endangered. The entire stock of lumber, which covers nearly a block, was believed destroyed.

Last of Survivors of War With Mexico, 98, Dies Here

Shock From Fall Given As Cause of Death of O. T. Edgar.

Owen Thomas Edgar, 98 years old, sole survivor of the American forces who fought in the War with Mexico, died early yesterday afternoon at the John Dickson Home, 5000 Fourteenth street northwest, where he had spent the last ten years of his life.

Death came to the distinguished veteran after an illness of one week, caused by a fall from a chair at midnight last Tuesday in which the aged man broke his leg. Nurses at the home said last night that the shock of the injury killed the veteran.

Up to the time of the accident, Mr. Edgar had been as well as a man of 98 can be expected to be, the nurses said. His last days had been peaceful. Life for him had framed itself into a view of a garden, and occasional walks down a sun-bathed corridor.

Almost his last words were in praise of the home in which he had spent the close of his life, it was said.

Mr. Edgar, until June 16 of this year, shared the distinction of being a survivor of the Mexican War with William Fitzhugh Buckner, of Paris, this very difficult and intricate problem that the first preliminary to a successful international naval accord is an agreement between America and ourselves regarding our own position.

"When I say this, I hope that it will arouse neither jealousy nor suspicion in the hearts of other nations. You can take it from me that the conversations in which America and ourselves have been engaged are in no way directed against anybody and are in no sense a conspiracy against anybody. First of all we wish to offer any agreement we may reach as a helpful lead to the rest of the world.

Speech Given Mixed Reception.

MacDonald's 40-minute speech was accorded a mixed reception. He reached the peaks of eloquence when discussing international peace and the Palestine situation and at such times was greeted with spontaneous applause. But when he touched upon the recent Hague conference, the French and Italian delegates, still smarting from what they consider a sharp deal, met his remarks with a coolness almost amounting to animosity.

The applause at no time endured for more than half a minute. The European delegates were most pleased when he announced Great Britain's and its dominions' impending accession to the optional clause making compulsory arbitration of disputes by the world court.

In revealing the progress of the American-British conversations on naval disarmament, MacDonald pledged the league that the understanding would not affect general disarmament adversely and would leave the five-power signatories free to proceed as they saw fit.

Wants Five-Power Pact.

"Britain declines absolutely to build against the United States," he said, "and that may be taken as the last word from both Labor and Conservative governments by America.

"We are after an agreement that is preliminary to summoning a five-power conference wherein other nations will be as free to put in their proposals and we will be as free to negotiate with them, as if no conversations had taken place between Britain and the United States.

"Great Britain and the United States can find their special contribution toward disarmament in the naval field. The best preliminary to this is an agreement between ourselves on very difficult intricate problems. It should arouse no suspicion in the hearts of other nations. Our negotiations are in nowise directed against nor are they in any sense a conspiracy against anybody.

The Last Word.

"The problem of armaments is not a problem between the United States and ourselves. The British government declines absolutely to build against the United States. The United States can take that—I think I might call it—as a last word, because it is not only the word of the Labor government—it is also the word of its predecessors, the Conservative government.

"What we want is an agreement which, having been made, shall be preliminary to the calling of a five-power naval conference, the other powers being as free to put in their proposals and we being as free to negotiate with them as if no conversations had taken place between America and ourselves.

"Our conversations have not yet been ended, but the agreement has gone very far. I do not yet know what form it will take and I shall say nothing at the moment that would in any way hamper President Hoover in his work.

Three Points Remain.

MacDonald then announced only three of the twenty point disputed remained unsettled at the present moment. While unwilling to hazard a promise, he said if final agreement could not be reached before his return to London, he hoped the announcement "will be made before this assembly comes to an end."

Striking a keynote that has found repeated utterance in American circles MacDonald urged the military and naval experts on the preparatory disarmament commission to realize there is as much security in "political agreements as in regiments of soldiers or fleets of battleships."

Leaving this phase to deal with the international economic situation, the British prime minister said, "Tariff barriers between producer and consumer are not justified by experience." He recommended the eventual transformation of political agreements into economic agreements which would make for economic freedom.

No Racial Conflict.

MacDonald reached his greatest oratorical heights when he spoke of the Arab uprisings in Palestine.

"There is no racial conflict in what has happened in Palestine," he said. "It was a situation where leaders of both races ought to have joined with a common voice in condemning ordinary crime. There is no Moslem-Jew conflict. Whatever its motive might have been, the uprising was simply a manifestation of lawlessness and disorder."

Pledging Great Britain first would get the situatoin in hand, and then seek by an impartial inquiry to remedy the causes and prevent the repetition of further outbreaks, the prime minister appealed to Moslems and Jews alike to cease newspaper propaganda and unite in reestablishing order.

"Let leaders of both peoples unite to support us," he said. "Let them unite to condemn what has been done and unite with us to see what the situation demands."

Defends British Course.

An atmosphere of expectancy pervaded the league assembly when the British Labor leader began his address. He immediately plunged into a frank discussion and defense of his country's attitude at The Hague which left the other delegates somewhat disgruntled.

Paying tribute to the mediatory prowess displayed at The Hague by Premier Jaspar, of Belgium, MacDonald said that the disagreements over the division of annuities had hidden the real issues involved.

"Our attitude," he explained, "was prompted by self-respect. Britain has repeatedly, since the finish of military operations of the war, given evidence of its willingness to share the burdens left upon Europe.

"We are convinced that lasting agreements can not be written by force in any form, not even by force of temporary and transitory majority."

Would Close Military Chapters.

MacDonald insisted that the misunderstandings at The Hague will eventually strengthen rather than weaken good relations between European countries. He predicted the agreements and treaties negotiated would be signed by all the nations within a few weeks.

Referring to the Kellogg peace pact, he said: "The pact of peace is still a castle in the air and the work of the league is to build a foundation for it."

The peace pact should not remain a mere declaration on paper, he continued, but should be translated into the constitutions and institutions of Europe in order to "close forever the old minitary chapters of history and begin new, brighter ones."

Shifting to disarmament, MacDonald called the movement the most important now facing the league.

Disarmament Put First.

"Disarmament," he said, "does not follow after successful peace negotiations, but successful peace negotiations are made possible only by disarmament. The world will never be able to trust to sound common sense until all together by cooperative enterprise we have substantially reduced the risks of war.

"The greatest risk is that all of us are too heavily armed."

The British prime minister then pledged the Laborite government to do everything possible to hasten a general disarmament conference.

The lack of enthusiastic response to some of the important points brought out by MacDonald was attributed in some degree at least to the unfamiliarity of most of the delegates with the English language. Mr. Loucheur feverishly translated the British prime minister's significant sentences to Premier Briand, but the French leader's only visible reactions were occasional affirmative or negative nods.

Brushes Notes Aside.

Brushing aside the few notes he had laid on the rostrum, the tall, handsome, impressive Scotchman dramatically appealed to all peoples and all nations to accept the risks of peace instead of the risks of war, saying that "he who seeks peace will get peace."

"Let us not forget the Biblical verse that says that he who draws the sword shall perish by the sword," MacDonald warned, his resonant voice filling the assembly hall. "I do not want my country to perish and I do not want my country to cease to exist as a self-respecting, cooperating community of people. I do not want our empire to perish, and I do not want it to be a menace.

"We must live by enlightenment, and the greatest of enlightenments is our willingness to reduce armaments and to set up conciliation to take the place of threats."

The prime minister said he believed the Kellogg pact could in some way be incorporated with the covenant of the League of Nations to certify its purpose of banishing war completely.

He expressed conviction that certain clauses in the covenant, resulting from fears in the minds of the world statesmen when it was drafted, already represent a dead age and should be eliminated.

Many delegates could not follow MacDonlad's speech closely because of their unfamiliarity with the English language.

At the close of the speech however, most of the delegates left their seats to shake MacDonald's hand as he descended from the rostrum. Premier Briand waited until he had hurriedly scanned a written translation of the address, and then he, too, joined the crowd felicitating the British prime minister.

No apprehensions have been created at Tokyo by the American-British naval converastions, representatives of Japan made it clear tonight. Ambassador Adachi told the assembly Japan was gratified these negotiations were progressing and hoped they would reach a speedy and successful termination.

British Leaders to Perfect Plans and Present It This Week.

MACDONALD BACKS MOVE

Geneva, Sept. 3 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Much interest is manifest here at the assembly of the League of Nations over the proposal to write essentials of the Kellogg peace pact into the League of Nations covenant, thereby outlawing every form of warfare except that which might be waged by league members and "cooperating nonleaguers" concertedly against recalcitrant states.

This is the ambition of Premier MacDonald of Great Britain and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson, who will propose rewriting article fifteen of the league covenant to that effect.

Appear Before Committee.

Henderson intends broaching the subject both before the assembly and the first commission—which deals with legal and constitutional questions—the latter part of the week. A special juridical committee probably will be appointed to study the problem during the coming year and recommendations will be submitted to the 1930 assembly.

British delegates have not yet worked out the details of their procedure and are consequently reticent about the innovation. The general aim is to close up what is considered the gap in the covenant—namely, the right of any league member to individually make "defensive warfare." It is understood that the British also have taken counsel with authoritative American representatives.

Statement by Kellogg.

It is recalled that the recent public declaration of Sir Eric Drummond, which significantly emphasized the interrelation of the Kellogg pact and the covenant was shortly followed by former Secretary Kellogg's declaration that steps should be taken to perfect the outlawry of war in the pacts immplications. Former Gov. Montague of Virginia, speaking before the Interparliamentary Union a few days ago, and Morton D. Hull, a member of the House foreign affairs committee, both stated publicly at Geneva that while the Kellogg pact outlawed war as an instrument of national policy, it did not prohibit war as an instrument of itnernational policy for the preservation of world peace.

The subject, it is learned, has also been discussed between Premier MacDonald, Arthur Henderson and Ambasasdor Dawes as the logical aftermath of the disarmament agreement.

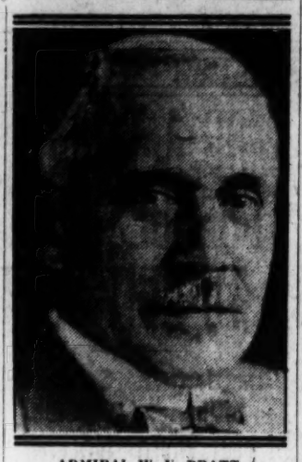
America Too Weak Today For Safety, Writes Pratt

U. S. is Already Disarmed In Comparison With Foreign Powers.



ADMIRAL W. V. PRATT.

America today is practically disarmed as compared with military forces of foreign powers, Admiral W. V. Pratt, of the United States, says in substance in an article on "Disarmament and the National Defense," appearing in the September issue of the United States Naval Institute Proceedings.

"Except for minor uprisings," he continued, "it would be impossible for us to wage an aggressive war. Even in defense of the homeland. In case such a contingency, however improbable, should arise, great national exertion would have to be made to place us even in a position of mediocre strength. To reduce our military armaments further might be to leave us a prey to internal dissension.

"In the matter of our sea forces, so long as we maintain the standard 5-5-3 set as a fair and just measure of our naval power, the position of America seems fairly secure.

"The effect of complete disarmament on America's naval forces while other great powers maintain their naval strength would be to place our relations outside the Nation's borders at the mercy of others should they choose to exercise their strength. They might never care to do so, nevertheless the potentiality would be there.

"The effect of complete disarmment of the great powers would be to leave them at the mercy of the smallest who did not choose to disarm. In this connection it is felt that the following is not an unfair statement of the case. The real question is not altogether whether nations will disarm, but whether they are ready to submit their disputes with their neighbors to some form of impartial arbitral investigation before they invoke their armed strength to act unjustly by other nations in the light of the results, and to scrutinize fearlessly and honestly the purpose for which, alone, they will allow their armaments to be used. Small armaments, if used for selfish or aggressive or willful purposes, may be a menace to world peace. Large armaments, if unselfishly and intelligently used in support of arbitration and justice, may be the preventive of war and a real bulwark of peace.

"Limitation of naval armaments on a definite basis is a practical thing. It is conducive to harmony and better world understanding. If lived up to, it tends to preserve the balance of power necessary to the equitable conduct of foreign affairs and trade relations with countries situated overseas.

"Until a higher degree of national and individual altruism exists in the world than is present today, the need for some naval armament will be present always.

"Attempting to visualize the future more briefly, in the light of the past, what do we see? The material world has broadened out, but nations and peoples still struggle in competition with each other in order to attain or maintain positions of vantage. In the new era of industry there are in times of peace forces working in competition with each other which, unless harmoniously adjusted, lead to clashes internal and external. If we view our problems from the broad angle and act in the liberal and fair way, great crises may be postponed and perhaps avoided. If, on the other hand, we take the narrow and limited point of view and act in arbitrary and selfish ways, strife in some form surely will arise, and strife then, as has been ever the case in the past, will be settled by a resort to arms.

KEEN WATCH IS SET BY REZONING BOARD

Applicants Must Write Out Reasons for Changes in Prince Georges.

ONE CASE CAUSES ACTION

Applicants for rezoning in Prince Georges County will have to file a written declaration of the purposes for which they plan using the rezoned property, the county commissioners decided at their meeting at Upper Marlboro yesterday.

The commissioners feel that they have had a "fast one put over on them," and are taking steps to prevent a recurrence, if possible.

It seems that last week J. B. Cochran was granted a change in zoning from residential to commercial for four lots on the Baltimore boulevard in Newman's division of College Park. The commissioners were under the impression that the property was being rezoned for the construction of a building.

Yesterday Cochran filed a petition for permits to build two signboards on the property, which will be leased to the P. & H. Morton Co., outdoor advertising company. The commissioners called upon M. Hampton Magruder, counsel to the board, to see if there was any way in which they could refuse the permits or cause the cancellation of the rezoning, but were informed that they had no alternative legally.

They then declared that Cochran would have to secure the permission of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission before the sign permits could be issued. The commissioners plan to be more careful in asking about reasons in the future.

James Watkins, colored, who is alleged to have stepped calmly from Hyattsville branch of police court several weeks ago while the court officials were engrossed in an interesting case, was recaptured yesterday by County Policeman Claude Reese in the swamp behind the Bladensburg Jail.

Watkins, who has a peg leg, was seated in court awaiting trial on five charges which grew out of a raid on his house made by Reese. The policeman suddenly discovered that he had walked out, the noise of his peg leg being drowned in the arguments of counsel. A hue and cry was raised but he made good his escape at that time.

YOUTH, 15, INDICTED IN HUNTING KILLING

VICTIM FOUND IN WOODS

Special to The Washington Post.

Stuart, Va., Sept. 3.—An indictment charging murder was returned in the Patrick Circuit Court here today against Claude Allen, 15, charged with killing Woodrow Harrell, also 15, while the latter was hunting squirrels near the Carroll County line Saturday.

The boy, who denies knowledge of the crime, is in jail here and will be tried in December.

Anxiety over Woodrow's failure to return Saturday evening caused the organization of a searching party. The boy's dog, which he had left at home, betrayed anxiety most of the afternoon, running about whining. Harrell was found with part of a load of gunshot in his face near a stump. He was still alive, but died before he could speak or be moved.

Deputy sheriffs claim to have seen footmarks in soft dirt nearby as well as a discharged cartridge. The footprints showed an irregular patch on the sole of one foot, they say. The trail led to the home of A. D. Allen, where, according to Commonwealth's Attorney R. E. Woolwine, a pair of shoes bearing a patch coinciding with the imprint in the earth was found. The shoes are said to have been Allen's. A shotgun and ammunition of the same brand as that carried on the discharged shell found near young Harrell's body also was found. No motive has been established, Woolwine says.

Chicago Fliers Break All Records Save One

Chicago, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—All previous endurance flight records beaten, except one, the Chicago We Will fliers continued their monotonous round over the Chicago sky harbor today, bent on breaking the St. Louis Robin's record of seventeen and a half days.

As dusk settled over the field, the pilots, Russell Mossman and C. Earl Steele, had spent more than 270 hours in the air and reiterated their intention of staying up until the motor went dead.

DRY CHIEF RESUMES ATTACK ON WHALEN

New York Police Head Told City and State Must Fight Speak-Easy Nuisance.

CAMPBELL DEMANDS AID

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The controversy between Federal prohibition authorities and Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen advanced a step further today when Maurice Campbell, prohibition administrator for New York, directed a letter to the commissioner asking whether the city's speak-easies, "as breeding places for crime," were not "a purely local problem to be handled by the municipal authorities."

In a previous letter Commissioner Whalen had returned complaints forwarded by the prohibition administrator and accused Maj. Campbell of attempting "to pass the buck" to the city police on a matter purely Federal.

Maj. Campbell denied this in his reply and declared that closest cooperation possible was necessary between Federal and police agents if the speak-easies were to be closed. He stated that the matter transcended a question of prohibition law violation and urged that the speak-easies be prosecuted as nuisances under State statutes.

"The matter is not to be considered as for or against prohibition," Mr. Campbell wrote, "but as a condition which the city of New York, itself, must face and rectify."

Quoting the statement of the police department that there were 32,000 speak-easies in New York, Maj. Campbell said that such a statement must have resulted from a survey by police officials and, with such a survey made, the police should be in a better position to conduct a campaign against these "nuisances." He also urged that arraignment of offenders be made before city magistrates and not before United States commissioners, where, he said, such arraignments by police were dismissed because of "illegal search and seizure" by police.

Maj. Campbell proposed that the city authorities and prohibition agents cooperate upon a plan to rid the city of "these obnoxious speak-easies," suggesting that "we forget the prohibition problem in this matter and together bend every effort to clean the name of this fair city."

Lawyer on Way to Wed Girl Pays Speeding Fine

Special to The Washington Post.

Matrinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 3.—A E. Bryant, of Wheeling, an attorney, did not delay to argue the case with Constable Joe Kane when the latter stopped him on the State highway south of here and charged him with speeding at 70 miles an hour. The attorney admitted the charge, waived his personal acquaintance with Justice Fred H. Baker, this city, before whom he was taken, and paid a fine of $15 on the spot. He had no time to delay, he said, because he had to reach Winchester, Va., before the county clerk's office closed in order to get a license to wed Miss Maude F. Turner.

He was sucessful, Winchester advices today said, with the marriage announcement. The bride is a native of New York State, is a trained nurse, and formerly lived in Alexandria, Va.

Lynchburger Indicted In Hit-and-Run Death

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 3.—R. Emmett Casey was indicted today by the Corporation Court grand jury on charge of not offering assistance to Mrs. E. W. Crowder the night of August 19, after he had struck and fatally wounded her with his automobile. Trial was set for September 12. In his preliminary trial, Casey admitted striking Mrs. Crowder and leaving without assisting her. He was captured August 24 at Augusta, Ga.

The same jury returned a true bill against J. B. McElveen, clerk in the drug store of Frank P. Jones, who ran away with Casey, charging him with ownership of a 400-gallon still found in a subbasement of his home in Fairview Heights. This case will be tried Friday.

August Sets Record Of 17 Years on Aridity

HERNDON TEACHER QUITS

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
Telephone Clarendon 919-J-1.

Excitement caused by the fire which destroyed the barn and outbuildings on the Davis Gheen farm near Centerville yesterday afternoon, spread into a general alarm by the report that Gheen's 8-year-old deaf and dumb son was trapped in the blazing barn. He was later discovered, however, hidden in a nearby cornfield.

The family was at dinner when the fire was discovered by a passing neighbor. The Fairfax Fire Department was called, but was unable to do anything owing to the lack of water.

The fire started in a shed filled with baled straw, and is believed it was started by the boy, who had got hold of matches.

A quantity of tools and machinery were burned in the building. The loss was estimated at $2,500.

Fletcher Kennedy, alias Walter Bird, of Clarendon, who was arrested after he had collided with a car driven by Cornelius Campbell, of 1206 V street northwest, Washington, near Merrifield, was fined $14 by Judge Moling at Falls Church yesterday on a charge of reckless driving. To do this it will be necessary for the supervisors to appropriate money for maintenance of the field.

Chancellor N. Brown, who has been in charge of the commercial department of the Herndon High School for the last two years, yesterday handed his resignation to W. T. Woodson, superintendent of schools. Ill health was given as the reason for his resignation.

Baby contest, Mary Lou Massey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Massey, of Bon Air, Va.

Charleston, Miss Mary Elizabeth Robbins, first; Miss Betty Lucas, second; Miss Kathleen Fall, third.

Greased pig chase, Raymond Holtzclaw.

In the afternoon the Herndon and visiting fire departments gave a fire fighting exhibition. Companies from Falls Church, Fairfax, Arlington, Cherrydale, Ballston, McLean, Potomac and Jefferson district, all of Virginia, and Gaithersburg and Washington Grove participated.

Pete Ferguson, of Gum Springs, Va., was arrested Labor Day after his car had sideswiped the car of Arno Schmidt, of 204 Bates road northwest, Washington, then dashed across the road and collided with an automobile driven by W. R. Turner, of 710 Tuckerman street northwest.

He was taken before Justice of the Peace Sheppard, of Accotink, and arraigned on charges of reckless driving and driving while drunk. He pleaded not guilty to the charges and was held for grand jury action.

T. O. Mills, county speed officer, had a busy week-end. He arrested the following persons for speeding near Accotink:

L. C. Todd, Richmond, Va.; William Kirkpatrick, Washington; C. E. Lovan, Hopewell, Va.; N. C. Hawley, Edgemoor, Pa.; W. B. Andrews, Richmond, Va.; R. J. Wood, Corona, New York; G. H. Fittenberger, Philadelphia, Pa.; Jo L. Pollard, Troy, N. Y.; Nathan Miller, 1100 Sixth street southwest, Washington; R. M. Stanley, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Frank Page, Richmond, Va.; N. P. Dr. Harry Walker and Mrs. Herbert Seemans, of the County Health Service, will hold a preschool clinic at the schoolhouse in Forrestville this afternoon. Lead Is Unchanged In Egg-Laying Test

Record for Past Week Holds Steady, With Production of 51 Per Cent.

Special to The Washington Post.

College Park, Md., Sept. 3.—[illegible] thousand hens competing in the fourth annual egg laying contest at the experiment station of the University of Maryland held steady during the forty-third week and closed with an average production of 51.31 per cent of a perfect score. This is but .35 per cent less than the mark of the week previous. The arrival of cooler weather, together with a local shower, has somewhat improved the quality of the greed feed given, which seems to be of considerable importance in maintaining health and production at this time.

Marshall Farm, of Mobile, Ala., still leads the Leghorn group, and for that matter the contest, with 2,218 eggs, followed in close order by the pen of George Walker, Oldham, Va., 2,188 eggs, and that of B. F. Bolton, Pomonkey, Md., with 2,178. Fourth honors go to the entry of Dr. L. E. Beasley, Grand Rapids, Mich., with a record of 2,163 eggs laid thus far. In the Rhode Island Red class the pen of Globus Poultry Farm, Attleboro, Mass., is in first position with an egg count of 1,939. Second place is held by the ten birds of C. E. Lee, Auburn, N. Y., with a score of 1,935 eggs, and third position is in possession of J. Z. La Belle's pen from Ballouville, Conn., with a mark of 1,913 eggs.

In the Barred Rock group the Pratt Experiment Farm entry, Morton, Pa., is first, 2,011, and second place is held by the hens of R. C. Cobb, Littleton, Mass., with 1,884 eggs to their credit.

Legion Booms Gen. Butler As Pennsylvania Governor

Movement to Form Clubs Gets Under Way Over Most of State.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3 (N.Y.W.N.S.). Maj. Gen. Smedley Darlington Butler, former director of public safety and now commandant of the Marine Corps base at Quantico, Va., is being boomed for Governor of Pennsylvania.

The movement got under way at the American Legion State convention at Scranton last week. Gen. Butler says he is not seeking the office.

Gen. Butler addressed the convention. Members got together and agreed it would be a good thing to start a chain of "Butler-for-Governor" clubs throughout the State to work for the general's nomination and election.

The first manifestation has come in Chester County, of which Gen. Butler is a native and now a legal resident. His father, the late Representative Thomas S. Butler, of West Chester, represented Chester and Delaware counties in the National House of Representatives for many years. Back of the Chester County movement are members of Bernhardt Schlegel Post, American Legion, of which Gen. Butler is a member.

Samuel Wesley Long, past commander, announced today that arrangements are being made to hold, later in the week, a meeting for organization of what they hope will be the first of the "Butler-for-Governor" clubs.

MAJ. GEN. S. D. BUTLER.

"Let it be understood in the beginning that I have nothing to do with this, and that I am not seeking the place. In fact, I don't know whether I would if it were offered me. It is true that I could retire from the Marine Corps now if I wished, because I have served my 30 years, but at the same time I can stay in the corps for about 15 years more before I shall have reached the age limit."

SHUTTLE CRASHES AGAINST MOUNTAIN

Third Refueling Attempt Fails When Hose Becomes Clogged.

NEW FLIGHT CANCELED

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The third, and probably the last, transcontinental refueling attempt of the ... Boeing mail plane Shuttle ended ... here today, when a stoppage in the ... line forced Capt. Ira C. Eaker and ... lieut. Bernard Thompson to land.

Neither pilot was injured and the damage to the plane, consisting of a broken wheel and wings, can be repaired, Capt. Eaker said.

The two men walked to the nearest road and hailed a passing automobile, which brought them to Salt Lake shortly after noon.

"We were going fine until last night," said Capt. Eaker. The fliers left New York at 6:35 a. m., Eastern standard time, Sunday, and were returning east after piloting the Shuttle to Oakland, Calif.

Bad Weather Report.

"We received a bad weather report in Elko and were instructed to spend the night there. We circled over the airport all night and experienced no storms until we ran into a shower west of Salt Lake this morning.

"The plane behaved wonderfully. It is one of the best I ever flew and very stable for night flying. The engine never missed a beat for more than 100 hours."

Difficulty in connecting up surplus gas tanks was responsible for the trouble that forced the plane down, Capt. Eaker said. It was necessary to set up extra feed lines, he explained, and an obstruction in one of these shut off the flow of fuel and stopped the engine.

This occurred at an elevation of about 1,000 feet over the mountains. The sun was shining at the time, but there was no possible landing field in sight and the plane crashed into the mountainside.

Pilots Sleep by Turns.

The pilots "got a little sleep," Capt. Eaker said, taking turns at the controls and lying down on a bed on boards over the gas tanks. Little trouble was experienced in refueling after a difficulty with the gas hose, experienced on the eastward flight, had been eliminated. More than 3,000 gallons of gasoline were transferred, he said.

"While refueling in flight is in a highly experimental stage, it is far more advanced than the airplane was a year after it was brought out," Capt. Eaker stated. "Mechanically, refueling endurance flights are feasible. It is little accidents like this one that make them doubtful of accomplishment."

Capt. Eaker and Lieut. Thompson will go to Seattle and get their Army plane left there. Capt. Eaker expressed doubt that another attempt at a record would be made at this time, since the Boeing Co. needs the Shuttle and the two refueling ships for its mail routes.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

OFFICIAL Washington confidently expects an agreement curtailing naval construction. It is confident that the final form of the agreement actually will not result in scrapping any American ships, nor in canceling any plans to construct the much discussed fifteen cruisers. What it expects is an agreement that will talk about parity in theory, and actually result in Great Britain reducing its own program, though still actually possessing a great deal of actual tonnage superiority so far as cruisers are concerned.

This theory is based by diplomats and officials here who have been studying the situation on the urgent need, as they see it, of Premier Ramsay MacDonald, cutting his budget to ease the burden a little on the British taxpayers. This need, they believe, is extremely pressing. It is so vital, they believe, that nothing will be allowed to enterfere with it.

In diplomatic circles it is pointed out that Mr. MacDonald will gain a perfectly satisfactory alibi, so far as British public opinion is concerned, if he comes back from Washington with an agreement which, while proclaiming the theory of parity, still actually gives undoubted superiority to the British fleet in cruisers.

HE will have another problem on his hands at once, in the employment situation. But it is believed that the imperative need for cutting down governmental expenditures now looms more menacingly than the comparatively small additional amount of unemployment which would be brought about by failing to construct some of the cruisers on the British program whose keels have not yet been laid.

So far as the Hoover administration is concerned the President and many of his advisers—though none is in the Navy Department—are willing to let MacDonald win such a paper victory. They want the principle of parity recognized, as it was at the Harding - Hughes - Balfour conference of 1921 and 1922. They want to do something to stop the armament race, which has been resumed so vigorously on cruisers as if there had been no Washington conference. But even further they would like to see the British government get out of its financial troubles.

Always an enthusiast on foreign trade, President Hoover is eager for every possible stone to be removed from the path of prosperity in Europe. He realizes more keenly than many of his predecessors how dependent prosperity in this country is on good times and therefore high purchasing ability, abroad. Further, he agrees heartily with President Coolidge's conviction that nothing so hampers and discourages business as heavy taxes, and that nothing so stimulates business as a lightening of the tax burdens.

In administration conversations much of the credit for the present boom in this country, reflected so sharply in the stock market despite the desperate drive of the Federal Reserve Board to deflate Wall street, is assigned to the reparations agreement in Europe, leading up to final approval of the Owen D. Young agreement modifying the Dawes plan.

* * * * *

THIS agreement had been foreseen in Wall street many months, and the financial district declined to be thrown off the scent by sensational stories indicating a break-up in the negotiations as certain. Big business, it may be said, expects greatly increased buying power from Europe in general, and from Germany in particular, as a result of this clearing of the air.

There remains, however, the British problem. Great Britain has not been enjoying prosperity. Taxes have been heavy, and uemployment has not only reduced the number of producers but has added to the tax burden because of the dole system.

There has been a theory in the Washington Government dating back as far as the days of President Harding that if something could be done to aid the British government in reducing its armament expenditures it might be that the necessary stimulation would be applied afterward to business.

All of which explains why President Hoover is willing to make considerable concession to Ramsay MacDonald so far as actual naval strength in cruisers is concerned, if the British government will first recognize the principle of parity in naval strength with the United States, and then proceed to reduce its naval expenditures.

Incidenatlly, despite all the camouflage on the part of both governments, there is no doubt whatever that considerable progress is being made. It may be taken for granted, no matter what may be said officially, that the day when Mr. MacDonald sails from England for the United States will mark the passage of the last barrier which might prevent the successful outcome of the negotiations. If Mr. MacDonald comes there will be an agreement. There may be details left to be settled, and orations to be delivered, but the really difficult points will already have yielded to negotiation.

TYPHOON DESTROYS SHIP; 28 MISSING

Mayon Goes Down in Ragay Gulf When Struck by Tropical Storm.

CREW'S FATE UNKNOWN

Manila, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—A typhoon, which has lashed Luzon Island for three days sank the steamer Mayon yesterday with reported heavy loss of life.

A dispatch to the Manila Railroad, owner of the Mayon, stated that the vessel was sunk off Pasacao in Ragay Gulf, and that 28 passengers were missing. Nine passengers were saved. What happened to the crew was not reported.

The typhoon first struck the southermost provinces of Luzon Sunday and Monday, causing much damage over several districts which were just recovering from the destructive storm of last November.

Passing out to sea, the typhoon whirled about and descended upon Manila, overturning some thatched huts of natives, hurling trees upon trolley wires and halting car service. The lower sections of the city were flooded by torrential rains. From Manila, the storm moved northward into the mountains.

The brunt of the typhoon is believed to have been heaviest in the provinces of Tayabas, Bulacan and Pampanga. Wires are down and details lacking.

INQUIRY INTO RIOTS IN PALESTINE OPENS

ing the establishment of a national Jewish home.

One of the chief efforts will be to determine whether the outbreak, which resulted in about 300 deaths, was spontaneous or had been plotted. On the findings of the commission will depend whether any modification in government policy may eventuate.

Sir Walter Shaw, late chief justice of the Straits Settlements, was named chairman of the commission and will have associated with him three members of Parliament representing each of the political parties.

Khalid Sheldrake, president of the Western Islamic Association, tonight made public what he said was the first official declaration by the Arab congress in Palestine to be received here and which declared that the Zionist policy was fundamentally the cause of the outbreaks.

It came from El Husseini, one of the leaders of the Arabic congress. It said: "Intense Jewish provocation regarding the Moslem holy day precipitated the outbreak which was fundamentally gendered by the Zionist policy that ignored Arab political rights.

"During the last ten years the Arabs have submitted without avail their case to Great Britain and the League of Nations. Order will be reestablished, but permanent peace will only be realized when the Balfour declaration is abolished and a democratic government is established."

Jerusalem, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Palestine in general was quiet today with the authorities pushing their inquiries into the causes of the recent rioting and taking into at least temporary custody scores of Arabs and Jews.

Tiberias, in upper Gililee, was the only source of anxiety, for telephone communication with that district had failed after reports had been received of scattering Moslem attacks which had caused a few casualties.

The Jewish telegraphic agency correspondent reported that fourteen Arabs were killed by troops when they attacked Yesod Ha'Maalah and two others were said to have been similarly killed near the colony Nishmar Ha'Yarden, both in Galilee.

The same source reported that 200 Arabs were arrested at Lifta and 130 at Hebron on suspicion of having participated in the riots.

Now that feeling does not run quite so high, stories of interracial heroism have gained circulation. One of these was the protection given four Jewish workers at the Rockefeller Museum by Arab comrades from other Moslems who sought to kill them.

Rumors that T. E. Lawrence "Lawrence of Arabia" had been in Palestine were denied today, but the report persisted that he arrived in Egypt some weeks ago. (Lawrence is now in the royal air force under the name of Shaw. A considerable force of this organization is stationed in Egypt.)

DEVER, ONCE MAYOR OF CHICAGO, DEAD

Democrat, Who Gained Many Reforms, Succumbs to Long Illness.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY

Chicago, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—William E. Dever, mayor of Chicago from 1922 to 1926, and prominent in Chicago civic affairs for a quarter of a century, died today after a year's struggle against a chronic stomach disorder. He was 67 years old.

The former mayor had been failing steadily for several months and two visits to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., brought him only partial relief. He returned from his last visit there two weeks ago.

Until a few minutes before his death, Dever seemed comparatively well and had been visiting with his sons, George A. and Daniel M., and Mrs. Dever.

Mayor William Hale Thompson expressed regret over the death of his predecessor, saying that he had heard only yesterday that he was critically ill and had ordered a quiet zone established about his home.

Elected mayor in 1922, when a split in Republican ranks enabled the Democrats to carry the city, Mayor Dever chose his cabinet from among civic and business leaders of Chicago and carried through notable constructive legislation and epochal public improvements.

It was during his regime "Wacker Drive," the city's famous double deck boulevard, was constructed and legislation permitting straightening of the Chicago River was enacted.

Though an ardent foe of prohibition, Mayor Dever directed the closing of an estimated 7,000 saloons during his term.

MUTINY ON BLAZING SHIP TOLD BY CREW

Captain Declares He Drew Gun to Keep Sailors From Deserting.

HEARING SET FOR TODAY

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Tales of a short-lived mutiny aboard the American oil tanker Paulsboro while the vessel was ablaze on the night of August 27, about 300 miles southeast of Mobile, were recited here today by members of the crew following arrival of the vessel to undergo extensive repairs as a result of fire which swept the engine room.

While seamen on the Paulsboro first charged there was a mutiny at a time the two-hour fire was at its height, Capt. John T. Pearson, located at the offices of the harbor inspector making a report of the blaze, said he instructed a boatload of seamen preparing to leave the vessel to stay aboard. At the time he had an automatic pistol in his hand, Capt. Pearson said, but he continued that he did not shoot.

Capt. Pearson said he was forced to leave the lifeboat loaded with sailors to visit the opposite deck of the ship, where more men were preparing to leave. He charged that while he was on the opposite side the first boat loaded with thirteen sailors left the vessel.

Capt. Pearson was accompanied to the inspector's office by seamen from the ship and a hearing has been called for tomorrow morning.

Members of the vessel's crew charged negligence on the part of some of the ship's officers during the fire, which threatened for some time to destroy the craft.

A watchman on the Paulsboro shortly after her arrival here refused admittance to newspapermen on account of "the vessel being filled with gases and fumes." However, members of the crew told newspaper representatives today that no one is allowed on the vessel in order to suppress news of the thirteen men deserting the vessel. Two S. O. S. calls were sent out by the ship during the fire.

MECHANIC OF LOST PLANE FOUND DAZED

Los Angeles, on the route followed by eastbound planes.

It is possible that a bolt of lightning struck the ship, as a severe storm raged over the desert early Monday.

Preparations were made at Los Angeles tonight for a search of the desert by fliers to determine what happened to the veteran pilot.

The Lockheed Aircraft Co., builders of Maj. Wood's ship, dispatched a fast plane to Needles. Three other airplanes were tuned up at the Metropolitan Airport, where Maj. Wood's flight was started, to search the country. One of the pilots was Col. Art Goebel, transpacific and cross-country flier, who withdrew from the race when his plane failed to function properly.

Meanwhile pilots on one Arizona and four California air lines scanned the country for a trace of the missing major, but late today the appearance of Miller was the only clew.

LAST MEXICAN WAR SURVIVOR DIES HERE

Mexico as a second-class apprentice seaman on February 10, 1846. He was honorably discharged on August 8, 1849, as a first-class apprentice seaman. During the three years of his service, he served on the U. S. S. Experience, the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, the U. S. S. Potomac and the U. S. S. Allegheny. After the war he returned to Philadelphia, his native city. He studied the printing trade and decided to make that his life work. On May 2, 1854, he married Miss Frances Anne Batchelder of Philadelphia. Mrs. Edgar died in Washington on July 2, 1903, and lies buried in Congressional Cemetery. Mr. Edgar will be buried at her side tomorrow afternoon after services at 3 o'clock at the Waugh Methodist Episcopal Church, 306 A street northeast.

In 1881 Mr. Edgar came to Washington and found employment in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Within a short time he was made a division chief. He remained at the Bureau of Engraving for 25 years. In the latter part of this time he had been attracted by the banking profession, and following his resignation from the Bureau of Engraving he became associated with the Columbia National Bank, where he remained for 31 years, when he was retired at the age of 88 on a pension.

An injury received as a young man after the Mexican War, prevented Mr. Edgar from serving in the Civil War.

Mr. Edgar is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Philo Bush, of 1812 Park road northwest, six grandchildren and five great grandchildren. The grandchildren are: Mrs. Clarence Bush, Mrs. Charles Curtis and Mrs. Helen Lancaster, of Washington, and William A. Edgar and Mrs. James Alexander Edgar, of Baltimore. The great grandchildren are: Edgar Allen Bush, Margaret Elaine Bush, Marion Alice Lancaster, of Washington, and Jean and Elizabeth Edgar of Baltimore.

Four years ago, there were eleven survivors of the Mexican War. This number dwindled to 4 in 1927. Today there is none left.

Aerial Funeral Held For Student Aviator

Auburn, Nebr., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Aerial funeral services were held today for William Kearnes, 17-year-old student flier killed in an airplane accident at Rapid City, S. Dak., last Thursday.

A trimotored plane escorted by two smaller planes brought the body here from Maryville, Mo., home of the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kearnes. Six fellow aviators from Rapid City acted as pallbearers. Planes which formed the aerial cortege flew over the grave and dropped flowers. The body had been sent to Maryville before arrangements were made for the burial here, former home of the family.

TWO MORE DOCTORS QUIT AT GALLINGER

terday with District Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro, Dr. D. Percy Hickling, District allenist and chief consulting psychiatrist at Gallinger, denied rumors which have been current recently to the effect that he is planning to resign in the immediate future, after having spent 40 years' service with the institution.

Meanwhile, the Board of Public Welfare is awaiting the stenographer's transcript of notes taken during the public hearings which have been held in connection with the board's investigation of complaints made against Gallinger and the methods of its operation.

Until the transcript is in the hands of the investigating committee of the board, nothing further can be done in the investigation, it was pointed out by George S. Wilson, director of public welfare. However, it is expected that the complete record of the hearings will be in the hands of W. W. Millan, chairman of the committee, today, and that a meeting of the body will be held tomorrow at which a complete report will be prepared for presentation to the Board of Public Welfare.

It was stated that resignations of members of the Gallinger staff thus far announced have no connection whatever with the investigation or its results, either present or pending.

Dr Bedford F. Floyd, who has just completed a year and a half of service at the Cleveland Clinic Hospital, following a similar period at the Memphis, Tenn., General Hospital, arrived at Gallinger yesterday to assume the duties of chief resident physician vacated by Dr. Gay's resignation. Dr. Floyd, who is 26, is a graduate of the University of Tennessee.

It was announced further yesterday by Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent, that Dr. Herbert L. Fossey, assistant professor of psychology of the University of Wisconsin and formerly of the staff of the Philadelpha General Hospital, has been appointed to succeed Dr. Kahn as chief psychiatrist. Until Dr. Fossey can complete arrangements for the change, Dr. Floyd Echols will continue as acting chief psychiatrist.

Dr. H. J. Lupoli, a graduate of Tufts Medical College at Boston, succeeds Dr. Gernon as interne.

Miss Emily Kleb also arrived at Gallinger yesterday to become principal instructress of nurses, the new term starting today with approximately 105 student nurses receiving training. Miss Kleb, who is a graduate of Lake View Hospital Training School at Chicago and was formerly superintendent of nurses there during 1921 and 1922, and who also holds a postgraduate degree from Teachers College of Columbia University in New York, is to have as her assistant Miss Louise Brooks, who has been a member of the nursing staff at Gallinger for some time.

SENATE WILL OPEN WORK ON TARIFF ACT

fight" and the books and statistics piled on his desk as he made the statement indicated as much.

Many Senators were rushing to the Capital for the initial tariff meeting, Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, taking an airplane from Los Angeles to Kansas City in order to speed his arrival.

Both Senators Watson, of Indiana, and Robinson, of Arkansas, respectively the Republican and Democratic floor leaders, were out of the city, and party predictions were left to their lieutenants.

Smoot said he would introduce the bill and submit the majority report to the Senate at noon after the full finance committee, which he heads, had voted the measure out. Under the rules, the bill must lay over one day before debate begins, but some senators believed a move would be made to adjourn until Monday to allow senators more time to study the measures amended by the finance majority.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, met with eight other Republican independents and discussed the bill for an hour, after which he said the "main point is to confine the revision to agriculture."

He said he had discovered no defections from the 38 Democrats and Western Republicans who voted for his revision limiting resolution last June and thought possibly it would pick up an additional vote or two. He has not definitely decided, however, to reintroduce the resolution, which lost by only one vote 2½ months ago.

Another meeting of the farm group will be held today. Only a general discussion was had yesterday, Borah said, and until a full attendance is assured, they would not be ready to talk about their program.

Those present at the meeting besides Borah were Senators Norris and Howell, Nebraska; Nye and Frazier, North Dakota; La Follette and Blaine, Wisconsin; Brookhart, Iowa, and McMaster, South Dakota.

The Democratic members of the finance committee held another lengthy meeting in the office of Senator George, of Georgia, but no special plans were announced. Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, the ranking Democratic committeeman, said further data was being gathered to support amendments the minority will offer on the floor.

Senator Capper (Republican) Kansas, an advocate of revison for agriculture alone, predicted proponents of the bill would not recognize it when it gets through the Senate.

It remained for further developments to determine whether the Democrats or Republican Independents would initiate the move to restrict the revision. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, who has prepared a resolution to strike out all rate sections of the measure except that covering agriculture, was out of the city, but it was supposed he would offer it at the first opportunity.

PREMIER'S SPEECH DISCOUNTED HERE

as much as a third of the fifteen-cruiser program. Since then something has happened to change the situation. The President has informed callers that all fifteen cruisers must be built—to the delight of the Navy. Whether he so advised Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, chairman of the Senate naval affairs committee yesterday afternoon, is a matter of conjecture. But the senator, after calling on the President, predicted that all fifteen cruisers would be built.

This alone would mean the vanishing of the President's reiterated aspiration for real reduction, rather than a mere stop to the competition in cruiser building. But more than that, the administration is fearful that still more cruisers must be constructed later on to come to anything like a parity with the British that will be acceptable to the big navy dominated Senate.

Trading Aim Discounted.

The theory that administration pessimism is deliberately calculated for trading purposes, to drive a better bargain with the British, hardly fits in with the constant reports that the negotiations have progressed in the utmost candor. Apparently it arises, instead, from reawakened fear of going up against an obdurate Senate that only public opinion can bludgeon into acceptance of a cruiser parity based upon anything save tonnage equality with the British.

A week ago administration officials appeared to think that public opinion could be brought to bear successfully in favor of a definition of parity or equality that evaluated small British cruisers more as police ships than as combat vessels.

According to the figures used here, the British have built or building or authorized and to be built a total of 66 cruisers aggregating 420,140 tons. The United States similarly will have 28 cruisers after completion of the 15-cruiser program to an aggregate total of 255,000 tons.

Reconciliation Was Sought.

Reconciliation between these two figures had been sought by having the British suspend replacements until 1936 or as late as 1940, and by a yardstick evaluation of relative combat strength that would work out so that the excess of British tonnage on smaller, so-called police cruisers, would be counterbalanced by American strength in big cruisers, but without requiring completion of all of the 15-cruiser program.

Whether the President's advisers, or adverse comment, or doubt about capturing public opinion, have wrought a change, can only be guessed at, but in any case, the tone of administration officials yesterday was in marked contrast with last week, and the surmise among Navy officials is that the President has come far over to their side and that any agreement now contemplated will leave the United States free to build substantially to a tonnage equality with the British.

Psychiatrists Would Take Place of Jurors at Trial

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Some psychologists would abolish juries and check crime waves by striking at their main roots, human misery.

Their ideas were given in a symposium on legal psychology at the ninth international congress of psychology today. The "misery" they defined attacks those in high places and low, intellectuals and morons, rich and poor.

Prof. Harry Elmer Barnes, of Smith College, who suggested a revision of the concept of God at the last meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in a paper presented during his absence, said:

"In any sound system of criminal procedure, the jury would completely disappear and would be replaced by a board of examiners, made up chiefly of psychiatrists and dominated by the psychiatric point of view. The judge would be reduced to the status of a formal supervision of the process, as he is today in the examination of those suspected of insanity. This examining board would determine the method of treatment desirable in each individual case and present it to the judge for his formal approval."

Relief of misery, said Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of New York, would be the safest crime insurance. Enormity of some crimes, he said, is out of proportion to the emotional miseries from which they spring. Apathy is one such source. From it come "excessive vagrancy," ruined careers and "craving for the thrills of criminal excitement to any extent, including murder."

An irresponsible spree, or a jail record, may rise from "moments of obsessive impulses aggravated by sex excitement." Mental instability leads some persons only to misery, but others to "criminal tendencies."

"The striking contrast in crimes in men and women," Dr. James Jastrow continued, "is itself convincing. Statistics show three to five, even seven times more crime among men than women. This does not mean men are seven times more criminal. Men's crimes are not women's because man's nature is not woman's, despite their overlapping. The largest portion of women's crimes is of sex. There is some thievery for finery. In women there are few crimes of plotting and planning, few bold crimes like burglary. The emotional boy's ambition is to be a gang leader, the girl's is largely to be attractive to men. So the shy girl and the timid boy have the same handicap, but in different boats."

Trigant Burrow, of New York, said, "Our normal and social standards of right and wrong do not represent scientific standards. It is of deep significance sociologically that both neurosis and trespass, insanity and crime with their basic lack of scientific criteria are the direct outcome of our normal standards of right and wrong."

HEARINGS ON BUDGET TO START THIS WEEK

Final Paring of Estimates Intended to Bring Sum to 1929 Figures.

SESSIONS TO BE SECRET

(Associated Press.)

Endeavoring to keep Government expenditures for 1931 within the amount spent in 1929, the Budget Bureau this week will begin the hearings at which the final paring down of estimates will be made for the first budget President Hoover will submit to Congress.

Hoover several months ago instructed the bureau to keep the 1931 expenses within the amount spent in the 1929 fiscal year, when the Government paid out a total of $3,848,000,000, an increase of $205,000,000 over the 1928 fiscal year. The bureau expects to be able to do this with ordinary governmental expenditures, but congressional action in making new appropriations is expected to send the total for 1931 over the $4,000,000,000 mark.

Minor Hearings This Week.

The first hearings to be started this week will involve the minor independent establishments. Beginning September 9 and running until November 2 officials of the huge departments will be given hearings to show the necessity of funds for which they have asked. No information as to the progress of the hearings or estimates of expenditures and income for the year will be made public until the budget is transmitted to Congress next December.

At the same time the bureau will make public its estimate of the probable expenditures and receipts for the current year of 1930. It has not made public such an estimate since that transmitted to Congress last December and did not announce such figures as usual at the start of the year of July 1.

Farm Board Budget Big.

Among the Congressional appropriations which are expected to send the total of the budget to the highest point since the war years are the $500,000,000 authorized for the Farm Board, $150,000,000 of which already has been appropriated. Other appropriations inherited from the Coolidge administration, which may prove a stumbling block in keeping the budget under $4,000,000,000, are the flood control appropriations, the naval program, and the public buildings program. Appropriations for fighting the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida added further difficulties for the bureau to meet. Up to this time the fruit fly campaign has had available $4,025,000 transferred from another fund, and Secretary Hyde has said he would seek $26,000,000 more.

who attend the dams under the supervision of the War Department. These dam tenders are compelled to be on duty practically 24 hours in the day, it was said. As a rule they are located in remote places, far removed from theaters and recreation centers.

Vacation Substitutes Asked.

The dam tenders are allowed a vacation, but in order to take it they have to furnish a substitute at their own expense. Consequently, many of them go year after year without taking a vacation. The federation will seek to have the War Department provide substitutes who would be assigned to a particular territory and relieve the dam tenders one at a time during the vacation period.

Among the other resolutions adopted was one urging the Secretary of War to stop the practice of displacing civilian employes of many years' training with soldiers, officers and warrant officers of the Army.

"This policy," said the resolution, "results in grave injustice to the civilian personnel by denying them well-earned promotions, thereby not only lessening the incentive of such civilian employes to give their best efforts to the service in which they are engaged, but also forcing many of them after years of faithful duty to the Government to leave the service."

The soldiers or officers who displace the employes, it was charged, are frequently lacking in the qualifications that are necessary to carry on or to supervise the work of the department.

New Illinois Theater Is Damaged by Bomb

Crystal Lake, Ill., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The El Tovar Theater, newly built at a cost of $150,000, was bombed today. Authorities said they believed labor trouble was responsible.

The damage was estimated at $5,000.

gia and Florida influences against Postmaster General Brown and James Francis Burke.

Those who are spreading this view say that an understanding has been reached that Huston, when he assumes office, is to make a thorough study of the situation in the South and report back to the President, whereupon the latter will try to straighten out the mess. If Huston is to do anything like this it would not seem that it would give either Brown or Burke any appetite.

It is not wholly unlikely that this is the plan, however. It is in the way of another investigation that takes time and at least keeps down any friction at the committee meeting. Presumably the committee meeting is to be only for the purpose of having the committeewomen and committeemen meet their new boss.

Jones Law Declared Real Aid by Lowman

(Associated Press.)

Assistant Secretary Lowman said yesterday the Jones law making commercial sale and transportation of liquor a felony has proved beneficial in the enforcement of the national prohibition law in the six months it has been on the statute books.

The Courts, Lowman asserted, had used with discretion the authority allowed them under the law with the result that no excessive penalties had been inflicted. "Personally, I think the law beneficial," he said, "and it is not going to do what some people predicted in the way of cruel and inhuman punishment."

Minister Summerlin Shifted to Venezuela

(Associated Press.)

George Summerlin, of Rayville, La., now Minister to Honduras, has been transferred to Venezuela as American Minister there. This announcement was made yesterday at the White House with the further statement that the transfer would take place almost immediately. A successor to Mr. Summerlin in Honduras has yet to be selected.

Summerlin succeeds Willis C. Cook, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., who announced his resignation some time ago.

Bogus Bonds Seized; Five Men Arrested

Chicago, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Five men, said to be members of a ring which has been peddling worthless bonds and $90,000 worth of their engraved offerings were seized today in a raid by State's attorney's detectives.

The men were James W. Smith, head of the bond firm; Joseph Rosen, W. R. Donohue, a man named Miller and Edward J. Harrigan, of Atlantic City.

The ring, according to detectives, secured title to vacant property here and then issued the bonds on it, claiming to have made improvements.

Hoover Sees Press Through Akerson

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover departed yesterday from his usual custom of seeing the Washington newspaper correspondents at noon Tuesday. Instead he spoke to them through his secretary, George Akerson, who returned today from his vacation.

Replying to inquiries, Mr. Akerson said there was no comment to be made on the disarmament negotiations between the United States and Great Britain and that the President had heard of no suggestion that Chief Justice Taft desired to retire before next January 1.

HOOVER'S FIRST SIX MONTHS ACTIVE ERA

Projects Initiated Include Half Dozen Commissions and Farm Relief.

KEEPS ECONOMY TO FORE

(Associated Press.)

A half year will have passed into history today since Herbert Hoover, on the rainy afternoon of March 4, was inducted into the Presidency.

A retrospect shows that for him it has been a busy six months. After the selection of a Cabinet and the reorganization, in part at least, of all of the ten big governmental departments, he initiated a number of new projects and in the carrying forward of these his work in many respects has just begun.

This work has kept the President close to his desk in the executive offices at the White House. During the summer while millions of his fellow citizens have been frolicking at seashore or mountain resorts or traveling abroad, he has confined his recreation to short week-end trips to a fishing camp on the headwaters of the Rapidan River in Virginia.

Prods Law Enforcement.

By so doing the Chief Executive, in addition to looking after the general run of the Nation's business, has placed more than a half dozen commissions at work studying as many different questions. One of the first to be appointed was the Commission on Law Enforcement. To this he assigned the duty of studying enforcement of all laws, including the statutes dealing with prohibition.

A start at reorganizing the American Diplomatic Corps also has been made. One of his first appointments in this field, Charles G. Dawes, no sooner was accredited as Ambassador to London than he began conferences with Premier MacDonald looking to further naval armament reductions.

Decision to appoint two other commissions already has been announced. One of these will study water power development in California, while the other will take up vexing problems connected with the proposal to bridge San Francisco Bay.

Further, the Army has been asked to examine its expense account and eliminate unnecessary items. Steps have been taken to relieve congestion in Federal prisons and plans made to ask Congress for $5,000,000 for additional prison facilities.

$26,000,000 for Fruit Fly.

Transfer of prohibition enforcement from the Treasury to the Justice Department also has been considered and Congress was requested to select a committee to study the proposal. Eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida has been undertaken and $26,000,000 will be sought to continue this work. A new policy in administration of Indian affairs is being developed. At the same time a study of child welfare needs is under way. The Federal Farm Board, meanwhile, has been organized and begun to function.

The Senate today will take up the tariff. This promises to develop many perplexing questions. The extra session is expected to run almost to the convening day of the regular session in December, at which time a new budget, the first of the Hoover administration, must be placed before the legislators. With this work in the offing, those old in political life in Washington say that even though the first six months have been busy the President will have much more to do in those to come.

Navy Secretary to See Launching of Cruiser

Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams will leave Washington tonight for Quincy, Mass., where he will attend the launching Thursday afternoon of the Navy's new 10,000-ton cruiser, U. S. S. Northampton, from the yard of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, wife of the former President of the United States, will christen the cruiser. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke will be present for the launching of the U. S. S. Houston Saturday afternoon at Newport News, Va. A large delegation of Texans also will be there to witness the ceremony. The delegation will arrive here in Washington Friday morning and go by boat Friday night to Newport News.

Gov. Dan Moody, of Texas, and Mayor Walter E. Monteith, of Houston, will head the party.

Prize Pigeon Falls Dead Over Body of Master

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 3 (A.P.). A homing pigeon flew over his boy master's body today and dropped dead. It will be buried in the same casket with Louis W. Balestrino, 19, Memphis youth and pigeon fancier, who was drowned yesterday while fishing.

The pigeon was the youth's favorite and had taken many prizes. It left its roost, circled gracefully over the house where the body lay, and dropped dead while swooping toward the porch.

Girl Student Hangs Self in Closet at School

Columbia, Miss., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Making a noose with her garments, Miss Dorothy Edwards, 17-year-old student in the industrial school here, hanged herself early today in a closet.

The body was found by another girl when she failed to appear for breakfast. She left a note to a sister.

Sinclair's Trips Outside Jail End

Ban Puts Stop to Special Privilege Enjoyed by Oil Man.

The Board of Public Welfare yesterday put a sudden end to Harry F. Sinclair's frequent motor excursions outside the walls of the District Jail where the multimillionaire oil magnate is supposed to be serving a sentence for contempt of court.

As prison pharmacist, Sinclair has been detailed, at the request of Dr. Morris Hyman, prison physician, to accompany the latter on frequent trips to the Seventh street sand and gravel wharves where semitrusty prisoners are employed. A branch clinic was established at the wharves about two months ago to avoid the need for removing ailing prisoners to the jail for treatment.

When Sinclair's excursions in Dr. Hyman's car beyond the confines of the jail became known to the Board of Public Welfare, the committee on penal institutions headed by Judge M. M. Doyle, was assigned yesterday to look into the matter, with the result that George S. Wilson, director of public welfare, later issued a statement to the effect that "under the circumstances, it was decided to discontinue Sinclair's trips."

Heflin's Son Makes Bail in Liquor Case

Senator's Boy Is Accused of Intoxication; Officers Seize Brew.

Phenix City, Ala., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Freedom on bond, pending a hearing, was granted to "Tom" J. Heflin, jr., son of the United States senator from Alabama, after the son and a companion had spent the night in jail on a charge of drunkenness.

Young Heflin was held also on a charge of violating the State prohibition law, after officers said they found three bottles of "home brew" in his automobile. The young man was arrested with B. M. Haines, of Standing Rock, Ala., who was charged with operating Heflin's car while drunk.

The pair was arrested around midnight last night when officers said the car was driven in a peculiar manner. Heflin said he had spent the week-end in Columbus and was returning to his father's home at Lafayette, Ala.

Morse Is Appointed Dry Head in Albany District

(Associated Press.)

Assistant Secretary Lowman yesterday announced the appointment of W. D. Moss as prohibition administrator for the district of Albany, N. Y. Moss has been assistant to Prohibition Administrator Campbell in New York City.

Moss succeeds Palmer Canfield, who was transferred to other duties after the prohibition commissioner expressed disapproval of his handling of the situation in the Albany district. Canfield was transferred to the legal department and the Albany office has been in charge of an inspector from the headquarters here.

International Air Race Planned for Next Year

Toronto, Ontario, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—An international air derby, to start in the United States and end in Canada, is planned for next year by C. O. Stillman, president of the Imperial Oil Co., who has announced that his company contemplates contributing $50,000 toward prize money for the event.

Development of air navigation in Canada warrants the holding of an aviation meet in this country which will rival in importance the Schneider Cup races, international speed classic, Stillman declared.

Carriers Indorse Dale-Lehlbach Act

National Session of Rural Delivery Men Backs Kelly Postal Bill.

Chicago, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Indorsement of the Dale-Lehlback retirement act, providing for the retirement of mail carriers at the age of 62, after 30 years' service, with a pension of $100 a month, was given by the National Federation of Rural Mail Carriers in session here today.

The convention also indorsed the Kelly postal policy bill, which provides for allocation of expenses on all franked mail to the Government department from which it emanates.

A resolution was passed asking the Postal Department to base the pay of rural carriers not only upon the number of miles they drive but also upon the volume of mail they may handle in excess of 200 families.

NEW VENIRE CALLED FOR GASTONIA TRIAL

Court Adjourns as Deputies Scour County for 150 More Talesmen.

TWO JURORS ARE NEEDED

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The remaining members of the second special venire were disposed of in short order this morning and at noon the court trying sixteen defendants charged with murder of the Gastonia police chief was adjourned while deputies scoured the county to serve summons on a third venire.

Only 150 are to be summoned this time, and from this number court officials hope to secure the two jurors necessary to complete the panel.

The police chief, O. F. Aderholt, was shot on the night of June 7 as he and other police officers entered the tent colony of the Loray mill textile strikers. The defendants were labor leaders or strikers at the mill. Three of this number, all women, are charged with second degree murder. The others face first degree charges.

The new venire of 150 will bring the total number having been called up to 668. The regular venire of 18 was quickly run through a week ago. Then followed two special venires of 200 and 300.

The court was somewhat abruptly brought to a close this morning by the unexpected objection of the defense to the use of this week's regular venire. Judge M. V. Barnhill yesterday had announced that since attorneys had said there would be no objections, he would call these eighteen before undertaking to have a new venire summoned.

After the first name had been called this morning, J. Frank Flowers, attorney for the defense, announced that the defense wished objection to this group to be noted.

Judge Barnhill replied he had been informed by Tom P. Jimison, also a defense attorney, that the defense was willing to have the regular venire summoned, but since there was an objection he would not use them. He then instructed the sheriff to dismiss the waiting prospective jurors and had court officials set about drawing names for the new venire.

Only 24 prospective jurors were called this morning and none of those examined was acceptable, the defense using seven peremptory challenges and the State five. Others were excused by Judge Barnhill.

Deputy Sheriff Found Shot to Death in Shed

St. Johns, Mich., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—William Kirby, 40, a Clinton County deputy sheriff living at Eureka, 10 miles northeast of here was found shot to death at 6 a. m. today in a shed behind a country church 6 miles northeast of St. Johns.

Kirby is believed to have been slain by burglars who brought him to the church in his own automobile. The one mark of violence on the body was a wound on the head.

Kirby was last seen at 1 a. m. today when he left an acquaintance in the street at Eureka to investigate a suspicious light in one of the stores.

Jurors for Mrs. Pantages' Murder Trial Occupy Box

Wife of Theater Magnate Appears Under Much Nervous Strain.

Los Angeles, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Six women and six men were tentatively in the jury box tonight at the end of the opening day of the trial of Mrs. Lois Pantages, wife of Alexander Pantages, millionaire theater magnate, on a charge fo second-degree murder. The accusation followed the death of Joe Rokufnoto, Japanese, from injuries suffered when Mrs. Pantages' automobile crashed into his last June, when the woman was alleged to have been intoxicated.

The prosecution expected another full court day to be spent in choosing the jury.

Mrs. Pantages, who was injured in the collision and spent several weeks in a hospital, appeared to be under considerable nervous strain.

Alexander Pantages, who is to go on trial September 23 on two statutory charges preferred by Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer, was a front-row spectator throughout the day. With him were his two sons, Lloyd and Rodney, and his daughter, Carmen.

Max Steuer, New York criminal lawyer retained by Pantages for the defense of his case, also was in court as an attorney for Mrs. Pantages. Outside of making two objections during the the prosecution's examination of witnesses. Steuer allowed Defense Attorneys W. I. Gilbert and W. J. Ford to conduct the opening phases of the battle. Their questioning of the jurors indicated that the State's allegation that Mrs. Pantages was intoxicated at the time of the fatal crash would become the chief issue of the defense case. They also disclosed the possibility of basing their defense partly upon malice, expressed or implied.

ZEPPELIN WILL REACH HOME TODAY; WELCOME IS PLANNED

French coast near Bordeaux after sunset.

French officials of the air ministry and pilots thought Capt. Lehmann would make a leisurely crossing of France during the night and arrive at the hangar in Friedrichshafen early Wednesday morning (around midnight Tuesday Eastern standard time).

The Graf made an unusually silent and unobserved trip today.

Corunna Sights Ship.

Corunna, Spain, was the first European point to sight the dirigible. It passed over that city about 5:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m. Eastern standard time) and disappeared in a northeasterly direction toward the Bay of Biscay.

The steamer Banta reported the Graf's passage off Cape Finisterre.

All observers remarked that the airship was flying very high, some saying she was advancing steadily and others that she was making slow progress.

The Graf was in constant communication with French wireless stations tonight.

The distance from Bordeaux to Friedrichshafen is roughly 500 miles, time of the Graf's arrival home depending on the speed with which she can negotiate this.

At 70 miles an hour, this could be covered in about seven hours, and at 50, in ten hours. Therefore if the dirigible reached the French coast about 9 p. m. she should be in, at the earliest, about 4 a. m. Wednesday (10 p. m. Eastern standard time Tuesday) and at latest about 7 a. m. Wednesday (1 a. m. Eastern standard time Wednesday).

Praised by Officials.

"The Zeppelin has made it again," was the comment of a score of French aviators assembled around the wireless station at the famous Le Bourget Air Field this evening as the reports announcing the Graf's approach to the French coast began to come in.

Air Minister Laurent-Eynac, whose repeatedly expressed policy is firmly opposed to dirigibles and in favor of airplanes, sent a wireless of warm congratulations to Capt. Ernst Lehmann as soon as the Graf made known her position this evening.

"A magnificent achievement," read the French air minister's message, which was intended both as a compliment to Capt. Lehmann on his first trip in command across the Atlantic and a recognition of the Graf's great flight around the world.

Germany Plans Welcome.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—German federal, state and city authorities today put the finishing touches to the program calculated to give the officers and crew of the Graf Zeppelin the greatest welcome they have ever received.

The booming of cannons will herald the sighting of the dirigible which is expected at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. Then as the Graf lands, federal officers and representatives of foreign governments together with Wurttemburg officials and officers from the Friedrichshafen works of the Hamburg-American organization will extend felicitations. After this the officers, crew and passengers are to parade through the festooned main streets in decorated automobiles supplied by the German Touring Club.

This will give visitors, already estimated at 50,000, an opportunity to see the heroes of the Zeppelin at close range, for only a chosen few will be admitted to the air field itself.

As a special surprise there awaits the Graf's officers and crew an invitation from the Hamburg-American Lines to go to Hamburg at the company's expense for a gay party.

U. S. Ambassador Present.

Friedrichshafen is full of notables. Among the early arrivals was the American Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman. Reservations have been made for Ambassador Nagaoka, of Japan. When David Lloyd George, former prime minister of Great Britain, telephoned from the Black Forest yesterday for accommodations for an English party of 10, the management of the Kurgarten Hotel regretfully informed him there was not a single room left. It is hoped, however, the British statesman will come to Friedrichshafen for the arrival of the Zeppelin tomorrow and that he will be a guest at the luncheon given by the state and city Thursday.

STRIKERS IN MARION SEEK SPECIAL TERM

Attorney States That Clients Should Be Tried When Feeling Abates.

TEN STILL LACK BONDS

Marion, N. C., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—D. F. Giles, attorney for the 79 textile mill strikers accused of rioting in connection with the Clinchfield Mill strike, today announced that he would ask a special term of the McDowell Suprior Court for trial of the cases. All have waived preliminary hearing and been bound over to superior court.

Giles said he believed time should be allowed for the feeling engendered by the riot to die down. The next regular term of McDowell Superior Court is set for next Monday.

Late today ten of those arrested still were in jail unable to raise the bonds of $100 to $200 asked for each. Alfred Hoffman, Southern organizer for the United Textile Workers, which called the strikes at the Clinchfield and Marion Mamufacturinf Co. mills said bond would be posted for them some time tonight.

There was little activity on the strike front today. The four companies of national guardsmen called out last Friday when a crowd of strikers stoned and clubbed sheriff's officers who sought to protect the furniture of a laborer moving here to work, continued their patrol of the two mill villages. The charges of rioting grew from the attack on the officers.

Field kitchens were set up today for the troopers and they apparently had settled down for a indefinite stay.

Ajt. Gen. Van B. Metts today ordered troops to stop confiscating pocket knives found on persons entering the mill villages. All persons without a military pass have been searched.

Theater, Once Stable Of Vanderbilts, Burns

New York, Sept. 3 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A match thrown carelessly in a small shed on the former estate of the late Commodore William K. Vanderbilt, of Oakdale, L. I., today fired the shed and the roof of the Idle Hour Playhouse, used by Little Theater groups and stock companies, completely destroying the playhouse and a storehouse filled with old furniture. The loss is placed at $200,000 by officials of the Idle Hour Corporation, owners of the playhouse who are developing a subdivision in Oakdale.

The playhouse is a landmark in the district, having been remodeled from the Vanderbilt stables. The 15-inch brick walls of the old stable were left standing.

Oil Operators Agree To Probation on Oil

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—A conference of oil operators here today agreed to ask the State corporation commission for an order prorating production in the Oklahoma City pool on the basis of a complete shutdown of all producing wells and the shutting down of drilling wells on their last casing point.

The proration would be for a 30-day period, which is considered sufficient time for pipeline companies to make preparations for handling the production. No drilling well would be shut down until it had reached the last casing point or top of the pay horizon. In other words, casing would be set and the well not drilled in until after expiration of the proposed order.

PHARMACIST FOUND DEAD OUTSIDE HOME

William E. Dement Apparent Heart Attack Victim Late at Night.

BODY LIES NEAR STEPS

William Edward Dement, 33, pharmacist at the Earle Drug Co., Thirteenth and E streets northwest, was found dead early yesterday morning near the steps of his home, 1407 Shepherd street northwest. Apparently stricken by heart disease, it is believed Dement fell from the porch while opening the front door. After examining the body, Dr. Joseph D. Rogers, deputy coroner, pronounced death due to natural causes.

His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Dement, reported that they heard a noise on the porch about 11:30 Monday night. The father went downstairs, opened the screen door, and looked out. Seeing no one, he said, he closed the door and went back to bed.

When they found that their son had not come home during the night, the parents became worried. The father went out on the front porch a few minutes before 6 a. m. and upon glancing over the railing, he saw his son's body crumpled on the ground in a space about 3 feet wide between the porch and that of a neighboring house.

He carried the body to the house and summoned Dr. Robert McNitt, who pronounced the young man dead. Deputy Coroner Rogers examined the body about 11 a. m. and came to the conclusion that Dement died from heart disease from which he had been suffering for a number of years.

Mr. Dement was well known among Washington druggists. A native of Washington, he was graduated from the Eastern High School and the School of Pharmacy of George Washington University.

MACDONALD'S PROBLEMS.

Prime Minister MacDonald's address before the assembly of the League of Nations threw little light upon the prospective understanding between the British and United States governments on the subject of naval armaments. He hopes, however, that the agreement will soon be completed, and it is inferred that it will then be made public. Mr. MacDonald in a conference with journalists of various nationalities laid stress upon the fact that the Anglo-American understanding will be purely tentative when reached, and is intended to pave the way for a conference of the leading naval powers. Probably the agreement will be found to contain several contingent provisions, depending for their fulfillment upon the concurrence of France and Italy.

Mr. MacDonald gave notice that the British government would sign the optional clause of the world court protocol. This clause obligates all signatories to agree to submit to the jurisdiction of the court all disputes and questions of a justiciable nature. It is noted that Mr. MacDonald's notice refers to Great Britain alone, and not to the dominions. Some of them have objected to the optional clause, and all of them insist upon deciding for themselves whether or not they will accept it. The tendency of the British dominions to exercise complete independence in foreign intercourse is one of the knotty problems confronting British imperialists, who can see nothing in the new tendency but the disintegration of the empire.

The Labor government's decision to adhere to the optional clause is in conflict with the vote taken several months ago in the House of Lords, when the optional clause was rejected. The debate revealed that deep cleavages existed between the home country and the dominions, which will become more apparent if the Labor government persists in an effort to induce the dominions to accept the jurisdiction of the world court over all their disputes with other governments.

The question of committing the British government itself to the optional clause may become acute when Mr. MacDonald returns home from Geneva. The pledge to accept the optional clause was given on condition that the Labor party should win a majority in Parliament. It did not do so, but Mr. MacDonald goes ahead anyhow. But in order to make his step effective he must gain Conservative or Liberal support, and in view of the strong position taken by the dominions it may be difficult to win the approval of Parliament. That Mr. MacDonald is treading new and untried ground in his desire to build up the League of Nations and its court, and that he is acting in good faith, is undisputed. Whether he can carry public sentiment in Britain with him, to the extent of gaining the approval of Parliament, remains to be seen.

The same observation holds good with respect to the proposed naval understanding with the United States. Public opinion in Great Britain, while favoring cordial relations with the United States, has manifested no disposition to promote these relations by weakening the British navy. Mr. MacDonald has only begun his work of reducing armaments when he and Ambassador Dawes agree upon certain general principles.

A MECHANICAL ROAD SIGNAL.

An experiment with a novel method of traffic control just installed by the Massachusetts State Department of Public Works will be watched with great interest by traffic officers everywhere. The "traffic cop" installed on Labor Day in Danvers marks the first attempt on the part of Massachusetts, as a State, to regulate "stop and go" signals. Heretofore the municipalities have installed and controlled all such mechanical regulatory devices.

The signal now being tested is operated by the passing vehicles themselves, which trip a switch upon approaching an intersection of the Newburyport turnpike and the Salem-Lawrence road. The signal is similar to that recently put in operation by the local authorities at Medbury Square, and the State installation in Danvers was selected by the Department of Public Works because the location is one of the busiest intersections in the State. The arrangement of the robot is such, according to reports which have come from Boston, that neither traffic stream can hold the right of way for any length of time without permitting the other to pass.

While it is scarcely probable that any such mechanical contrivance can be successfully substituted for present traffic lights in the congested sections of large cities, motorists generally will indorse the idea of such a change as that proposed by the Massachusetts authorities in sections where traffic is comparatively light, and where at present much unnecessary delay is inevitable while awaiting the change of signals when not a vehicle is in sight.

WASHINGTON LEADS.

Washington's progress in city planning, as reported by the American Institute of Architects, is gratifying to all residents of the District and the country at large. The Capital City has made phenomenal advancement in the last few years, due to the cooperation of the Planning Commission, Congress and many distinguished architects. It is appropriate that Washington should become a model of city planning to which the rest of the country can look for inspiration and guidance.

It is generally recognized that Washington is well on its way toward realization of its ambition to become the most beautiful capital in the world. Its chances for esthetic development are excellent. The New York Times points out that "the 'skyscraper blight' has not descended upon the District of Columbia. It may be kept permanently free from that curse of industrial life, the smoke nuisance. It can prove, more convincingly than any other American city, that the gridiron is not the only thing in street patterns. It can show the advantages, as well as the beauties, of broad radial avenues and spacious parkways. It can set an example in the design of public buildings. It can tell how to make a winding stream a civic asset, and not a city dump."

By pointing the way to scientific city planning the Capital is rendering the whole country a service. Every citizen takes pride in seeing the American Capital a beautiful city, but he has a still greater interest in the embellishment of his own home town. Hence, if Washington's example is copied the country will reap double benefit.

The institute's report noted that architects in every part of the United States are giving attention to city planning. There has been widespread interest in the planning of Washington, and that interest has spread to general problems of city growth. The institute's campaign in the interest of coordinated city growth should meet with immediate response. The next few decades are certain to witness unprecedented city building, and those communities which fail to provide for systematic expansion will be subject to extremely heavy costs later.

Coincident with the institute's campaign comes an announcement that the first school of city planning in this country will be established at Harvard University this fall with the aid of the Rockefeller Foundation. It will be a graduate professional school for training of expert city planners and education of architects, landscape architects and engineers in the various branches of the subject. This move gives assurance that expert city designers will be available. No city of the future need retain the squalor and ugliness of past centuries for want of expert advice.

PASSING THE BUCK.

Federal prohibition authorities and New York law enforcement officers are engaged in a little game of "passing the buck" that is amusing the whole country. When it comes to enforcement of prohibition New York is willing to let Uncle Sam do it. But Uncle Sam is insistent upon receiving State cooperation. The Government will undertake to check the flow of liquor from Canada and to cut off other major sources of supply, but it does not want to be bothered with New York's 32,000 speak-easies.

Maurice Campbell, Federal prohibition administrator, saw an opening through which some responsibility might be shifted to the State in the recent decision of the court of appeals that roadhouses and speak-easies may be prosecuted under State law as nuisances. He notified the district attorney and police department that he would bring to their attention all complaints which might be prosecuted under the nuisance law. But Police Commissioner Whalen immediately declined this offer, and suggested to Mr. Campbell that "if he is unwilling to discharge his sworn obligations" the admission should be made primarily to his superiors in Washington. He has made it plain that New York City has no intention of furnishing the 5,000 men and $15,000,000 per year, which, he says, would be necessary to enforce the nuisance law against speak-easies.

This is the second attempt that has been made recently to secure State prosecutions of liquor venders in States which have no enforcement law. United States District Attorney Woodcock, of Baltimore, brought to the attention of Maryland officials this week a statute which prohibits the sale of liquor without a license. The State can not issue licenses to speak-easies. Therefore, it is within the province of local authorities to prosecute violators of the prohibition law. It goes without saying that all such attempts will have no effect on the noncooperating States. If they really intended to prevent liquor traffic they would enact statutes providing machinery for enforcement. It is useless to revive old statutes and try to secure by indirection cooperation which has been denied by the State legislatures.

These maneuvers are interesting, however, because they confirm the many recent intimations that the administration will seek to shift responsibility for local enforcement on the States. The time may come when the Government will consider that it has performed its full duty when it has stopped smuggling and interstate transportation. Local authorities would then be held fully responsible for the speak-easy nuisance and bootleggers who operate on a small scale. This situation would more nearly approach local option, with the Government ready to protect the dry States from smuggling and interstate leakage. The so-called wet States would be little if any more wet than at present, and the States really in favor of prohibition would be aided in enforcing it. Such an arrangement would give new meaning to the concurrent clause in the amendment and might prove far more satisfactory than the present duplication of Federal and State activities.

RISE OF THE CARROT.

There was a time, not so very long ago, when the Bureau of Economics of the Department of Agriculture scoffed volubly at the suggestion that some record should be kept of the condition of the bean crop, and the then chief of the publication division said contemptuously: "I suppose that the next suggestion will be that we should report on the condition of the cabbage crop, in order that the manufacturer of sauerkraut may be posted as to the prospects for his supply of raw material."

The following year that official had occasion to visit a section of the country which was largely devoted to the production of beans and the lowly cabbage. He learned that one county in Michigan grows several millions of bushels of "Boston beans" each year, and that as many as 100 carloads of cabbage were shipped from one rural station in New York State in the course of a season. Now the condition of vegetable crops of all sorts are as carefully noted by the department as are the corn, wheat and cotton prospects.

But if there ever was a "crop report" on carrots issued from the Bureau of Economics in the past it has escaped notice. Now, however, the bureau comes out with the surprising news that the carrot is no longer primarily utilized as a vegetable dessert for the equine race, or as a seasoning for soups. Carrots have at last achieved a place in the dietary economics of the American household at least as important as the much-maligned spinach. The growth of the carrot industry, so to speak, is simply astounding, for while the total shipments of that flaming vegetable reached only 3,184,000 bushels in 1923 the shipments last year from producers to markets were 6,628,000 bushels, and the trade is on the increase.

"Consumption has been stimulated," according to the Bureau of Economics, "by better appreciation of vegetables in the diet and through greater care of preparing the legumes for the market, modern refrigeration and fast transportation to city markets."

Fresh vegetables are now obtainable throughout the year, and this fact accounts in a large measure for the continued falling off in the demand for meats.

TREND OF SMALL HOUSE DESIGNS.

Commercial Standards Monthly of the Bureau of Standards.

Preliminary findings resulting from a field study of small-house construction in 38 cities were described in an address before the home builders and subdividers division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in Boston by James S. Taylor, acting chief of the division of building and housing of the Bureau of Standards. This study was undertaken to find out what sizes, shapes and kinds of small houses are being built in American cities, how they are finished and what equipment goes into them. It is expected to furnish facts that will aid in the bureau's program of cooperation with business, architectural and other groups to encourage better and more economical construction of houses and to promote home ownership on a sound basis.

The speaker noted a distinct improvement in American domestic architecture, which he said "is due in no small measure to the improvement in public taste which is taking place." After pointing out the influence of the automobile on the spreading of home areas into the suburbs, he further stated that "modern features that contribute to saving time and labor in housekeeping and that make for health and comfort have come to be demanded in most new houses and absorb a considerable part of the cost of the house. This has created a pressure to cut down on the cubical contents and has meant somewhat smaller room sizes, lower ceiling heights and greater attention to economical arrangement of space.

"This process has its limits and there are already some evidences of a reaction. Where people can afford more space without too much extra labor for housekeeping they are glad to have it. Some prophets foretold the passing of the dining room in the small house, arguing that, being used only three times a day it was the most expensive space in the house. A good breakfast nook and well-planned arrangements for serving meals at one end of the enlarged living room, so they said, would suffice, but there is no proof yet that they are right. In our survey we found many small houses where a breakfast nook was added, but almost none where the dining room was omitted.

"In the small houses visited in our survey, mostly five or six rooms, kitchens were more nearly alike in size than any other room. Most of them contained about 100 square feet, with the width about three-quarters of the length, so that 8 feet 10 inches by 11 feet 8 inches would be typical. Living rooms from 11 to 15 feet wide and 15 to 22 feet long, with the width commonly about two-thirds the length, were most frequent. Dining rooms tend to be more nearly square, with about half again as large in area as the kitchens. Bedroom sizes run distinctly larger in two-story than in one-story houses. owner's bedroom in many two-story houses is over the living room and of about the same size. These figures represent actual practice, which may or may not be the best, and variations are frequent, due to differences in local customs or conditions and the varying needs of individual families.

The Buzzards Always Gather Where the Lion Makes His Kill.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WITHIN recent months considerable publicity has been given to stowaways; and since the news value of an incident is determined by its rarity, the public is made to believe that thefts of transportation are few.

Knaves of this type are not rare however. They are so numerous, in fact, that the business of hooking on behind might be called a national characteristic.

The stowaway's purpose is to steal a ride—to get somewhere without paying his way or working his way. And that purpose is achieved by thousands, possessed of more gall than honor, who never travel anywhere except on the road to success.

When one American makes good in any field of endeavor, a score of imitators sneak into the spotlight to steal his bows and snatch part of his profits.

A motion picture meets with popular approval, and within a month rival producers are working night and day to make one like it.

A stage success is followed by half a dozen fourth-rate productions that copy its scenes and steal its lines.

Every comic strip that becomes popular, every newspaper feature that wins a following, every vaudeville skit that goes over big, every song that strikes a popular chord, every innovation and every manufactured article that wins public approval—all without exception are robbed of their just monopoly by jackals that gather out of the darkness of obscurity to snatch a fragment of the kill.

Stowaways, all of them—stealing what they haven't the wit to earn—filching the rewards of better men—riding to success on the other fellow's vehicle.

Copyright and patent laws prevent outright theft of labels and trade names and prevent the exact copying of literary words, but the country is full of imitators who live on the fat of the land by stealing enough to give their sorry product the benefit of another man's genius.

Law can't prevent it, but a decent regard for fair play and good sportsmanship can make it unprofitable.

The proper way to treat an imitator is to say to him: "You are a common sneak thief—reaping where you did not sow—riding to success on a better man's back. However good your product is, I will not be a party to your dishonor."

Let all decent sportsmen adopt that plan and the stowaway will trouble us no more.

Municipal Reception to the First Oyster.

This is September and plans were announced today at City Hall for a suitable reception to the First Oyster.

* * * *

The event had escaped the attention of the mayor's reception committee, which is generally alert and on the job in such matters, but a visit to City Hall this morning by the Friends of Oysters Society was sufficient to stir the committee to immediate action.

* * * *

"What! Nothing done about welcoming the First Oyster?" demanded the mayor when a spokesman for the Friends of Oysters addressed him. "What kind of a city is this, anyhow? Where's my reception committee chairman? I'll summon him at once. Let it never be said of me that I failed in my duties to the oyster."

* * * *

To cries of "Bravo!" "Long Live the Oysters' Friend!" "Fair play for bivalves!" &c., the mayor stepped on a buzzer and reception chief appeared instantly.

"What have you done about receiving the oyster?" demanded the mayor.

"What oyster?" asked the chairman.

"What oyster did you expect?" snapped the mayor.

"I didn't expect any oyster," stammered the chairman.

"Well, it's September, the opening of the oyster season. The First Oyster will officially arrive tomorrow and you stand there and admit you have made no plans for a welcome!"

"I'm a clam devotee myself," explained the chairman, "but I will make immediate plans to receive the First Oyster in such a manner that your administration will in no way be embarrassed."

* * * *

Ten minutes later the following reception arrangements were announced:

6 a. m.—First Oyster sighted.

6:30 a. m.—Automobiles go to meet it, carrying delegations of oyster-bar attendants, church supper chairmen, &c.

7 a. m.—Oyster is greeted by the mayor's special committee on First Oysters.

8 a. m.—Oyster is placed in a limousine and escorted to City Hall.

9 a. m.—Address by mayor congratulating oyster on its arrival, stating that it marks an epoch or something and promising it a square deal.

9:15 a. m.—Gloria trumpeters and concert by Oyster-Openers Vested Band.

September.

Welcome, little oyster
To the oyster-bar!
Gone are all the months that Didn't have an "R."

Ever since last April
We have longed for you;
Welcome, little stranger,
To our oyster stew!

Excuse Enough.

NORRIS' SLAVES.

Taken by and large, the state of the Union, as viewed through Senator Norris' glasses, appears to be pretty depressing, observes the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The people are in "economic slavery" to the horrendous "interests," they are in political slavery through continuance of the electoral college and their bonds are riveted by a Federal judiciary appointed for life terms. Other forms of slavery he discerns also.

Senator Norris presents his picture at an appropriate time. Their destitution has not been realized by the "slaves" who drive daily to their work in automobiles of no small price. Their political bondage has not been appreciated as they have gone to the polls to elect their President, usually with some discernment, and, somehow they appear to hold the Federal judiciary in considerable esteem. Perchance, their vision has been dimmed by prosperity and general contentment.

Senator Norris speaks at an opportune moment. It may be feared, however, that few will pause in their work and play to give ear to his dolorous disclosures.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Money Paid Out by American Tourists in Europe Would Pay the War Debts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Bertrand Shadwell, writing from Vienna, Austria, is evidently not well posted on American history. He suggests that we of the United States have it within our power to buy the peace of the world. Mr. Shadwell simply voices the sentiments expressed in various forms by other writers of foreign allegiance, who have intimated from time to time during the last decade that this Nation should forgive its debtors for the comfort of Europe and the peace of the world.

We are willing to have peace, even if we have to fight for it, but the slogan of this country for upward of 150 years has been "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." If there is any difference between tribute and cancellation, some of us who bought the bonds which represent so many millions of debt due from European nations are unable to define that difference.

America is in the market for raw materials from all the world, but this proposal of the well-meaning writer from Vienna is rather too raw. In Europe every hotel man, every storekeeper and every other person having anything to sell is sharing in the funds which American tourists are pouring into those countries. Save your profits and pay your debts, Mr. Shadwell.

P. J. OSTRANDER.

Why Have a Sheriff, When State Constabulary Is Always Available?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Shall the office of sheriff be abolished? This question is the subject of much newspaper discussion in New York State. The agitation is due to the fact that former Gov. Smith and his successor, Gov. Roosevelt, are on record as desiring to consolidate the duties of many of the State officers. Gov. Smith has said there are altogether too many counties in the State. But he did not receive much encouragement when he suggested the consolidation of several rural counties in the interest of economy, because the local politicians and members of the Assembly feared a loss of prestige and patronage.

Now a very decided movement has started in some of the western counties to abolish the sheriff's office. The center of the movement appears to be in Niagara County, where the newspapers have discovered that their sheriff accumulates fees and emoluments approaching the salary of the President of the United States. Although the fee system for sheriffs was supposed to have been abolished years ago, it is found that mileage and other allowances to deputies in serving papers are divided with the chief.

Other counties have followed the lead of Niagara and inasmuch as the State constabulary, with divisional headquarters in practically every county, is available for service at all times and is, besides, one of the most efficient organizations in the country, it is felt that rural communities can get along very well indeed without the obselete officer known as sheriff.

Government Can Not Favor One Class of Labor Over Another, Says Mr. Lanier.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of September 2, Mr. Opie appears to interpret my letter to you of a few days ago as an attack on labor unions. Nothing was farther from my thought, and it bears no such construction. The right of labor to organize, and bargain collectively, is indisputable, and it has undoubtedly greatly improved and advanced the welfare of laboring people. Responsible organizations, like the American Federation of Labor have greatly improved in their methods under intelligent and honest leadership, thereby greatly advancing their cause and welfare.

The sole purpose of my letter was to point out and emphasize the fact that the Government is of, by, and for the people, and can not in justice recognize any one class at the expense, or to the detriment of another.

I protest very earnestly Mr. Opie's statement that "it is only right and fair that our Government should favor union labor;" which can only mean at the expense and to the prejudice of all other labor. It has no more legal or moral right to favor one class of labor than it has to favor one religious sect over another. The Government has but one duty, and that is the equal protection of all the people.

A. S. LANIER.

DEPORTATION COSTS.

Exportation of 12,908 aliens during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, cost the United States Government $926,049.97, or an average of $71.47, according to the Atlanta Constitution. Of the 12,908 aliens sent away from this country, 5,600 went to Europe, 2,800 to Canada, 3,300 to Mexico and the remainder to Asia, Africa and various other parts of the world. Included in the total are 1,900 aliens who departed of their own accord, if not free will, or "reshipped one way foreign," as the immigration authorities express it. It is to be doubted that the United States gained more genuine benefit from any other money it spent during the fiscal year in question and it could have expanded its activities along such lines to advantage. Many of the aliens listed above were deported for more or less technical reasons and bootleggers, gunmen, gangsters and others left undisturbed. As a matter of fact, the immigration officials need more latitude than they now have in the matter of deportation in general. It is necessary to bar certain persons and let others remain contrary to common sense.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Cynthia Davis To Be Capital Bud This Year

Mother Leases Home to Give Daughter Taste of Society.

By JEAN ELIOT.

TO the already imposing list of next season's debutantes one may add the name of Miss Cynthia Davis, daughter of the Governor General of the Philippines and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis. It is with the idea of giving her second daughter a taste of society in Washington, where her elder sister, Miss Alice Brooks Davis, was a belle, that Mrs. Davis has leased Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier's house at 1735 Massachusetts avenue for next season.

The plans of the Davis family are all rather tentative, depending upon the condition of Mrs. Davis, who is a sufferer from that most stubborn of maladies, arthritis. But she hopes after Christmas to be able to join Governor General Davis in the Philippines, taking her daughter with her, and, at all events, Miss Cynthia Davis will go out then to be with her father and her older sister, who is gathering fresh laurels as chatelaine of the Governor General's mansion in the Philippines. And for the early part of the winter Mrs. Davis and the younger members of the family will make their headquarters in Washington. Pretty Cynthia will not have the distinction of being a Cabinet bud as did her sister, who was presented while Mr. Davis was Secretary of War, but plans are already in the making for her coming out party.

At the moment the Davises are widely scattered, Mr. Davis and Miss Alice Davis being in Manila; Mrs. Davis at Wardman Park Hotel, making occasional visits in Baltimore, where she is undergoing treatment; Miss Helen Davis in Maine with an aunt and Miss Cynthia Davis and her brother, Mr. Dwight F. Davis, jr., on their way back from Europe. They sailed on August 28 and will probably land within the next few days. Miss Davis has been traveling abroad with a cousin.

Mr. Dwight F. Davis, jr., will return to Harvard University in the autumn for his last year and the youngest of the family, Miss Helen Davis, is to go to Foxcroft School.

Recurrent rumors of the engagement of Miss Alice Davis to Mr. Allan Hoover, son of the President and Mrs. Hoover, cause considerable amusement in the Davis family, since the young people have met but a few times. On one occasion the two were guests at a party at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds. A group picture was taken in which Miss Davis and the President's son chanced to be standing together. It was published widely and that, presumably, was enough to start the gossips buzzing. At any rate, I'm told that the first question asked Miss Davis when she left the boat in the Philippines, was, "Are you to be married to Mr. Allan Hoover and, if so, when?" It's too bad to scotch such a pretty story, but facts are often very cramping.

Gen. and Mrs. Crozier are such globe trotters that they have been very little in Washington of late and their house has had a succession of interesting tenants. If memory serves, Representative and Mrs. Richard Aldrich occupied it for a while and last winter it was the home of Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew. She has decided to make her permanent winter home in Washington, and with this end in view, has purchased Mrs. Divine Webster's house—also in Massachusetts avenue, but out beyond Dupont Circle—of which she will take possession in the autumn.

The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Carlos G. Davila, was host at dinner last evening at the embassy in compliment to Mr. Louis B. Mayer, of Culver City, Calif. Fall Moving Starts Soon Among Elite Usual Change in Homes to Begin as Season Gets Under Way.

That merry game of "pussy wants a corner," in which Washington society indulges each autumn, is about to begin. The Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, who have been living for a time in Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis' house at 1500 Massachusetts avenue, the home of her father, the late Levi P. Morton, formerly Vice President, have leased for next season the residence at 1520 Eighteenth street. This house belongs to Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Reynolds Hitt, but has been occupied for the last two or three years by Senator and Mrs. Walter Evans Edge, who are to be Paris bound as soon as Senator Edge can be released from his duties on Capitol Hill to assume his new post as United States Ambassador to France.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills first leased Mrs. Eustis' house two or three years ago, but were released from their contract when Mr. Mills decided to run for governor of New York against Gov. Smith. He was defeated, it will be remembered, but it was not until a year later that they finally took possession of the great mansion. Mr. Mills, who has been in New York for a few days, is expected here today, but Mrs. Mills will not return to Washington until the end of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Butterworth will also join the "moving day" caravan in October, having leased the apartment at 1785 Massachusetts avenue formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Welles. Mr. Butterworth, who is president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has been living at the Hay Adams House.

The fact that Mr. and Mrs. Welles have given up their pied a terre in town gives color to their friends' theory that they will make their year-around home at Oxon Hill, the great estate in Maryland overlooking the Potomac which they purchased some two years ago and which they have rebuilt into a mansion of impressive beauty. They took possession early in June.

Col. L. G. Ament has come from New York and is passing a short time at the Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. Joseph E. Thropp has been joined at the Wardman Park Hotel by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr.

Kelloggs Go To Dinner at White House

Gov. and Mrs. Green, as Well as Dr. Work, Are Also Guests.

The President and Mrs. Hoover had Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, and Mrs. Kellogg as dinner guests last evening. They were the only "outsiders" in a little party which included the Governor of Michigan and Mrs. Fred W. Green and Dr Hubert Work, retiring chairman of the Republican national committee. Gov. and Mrs. Green arrived at the White House yesterday morning and Dr. Work is also visiting at the White House for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, who were at the Mayflower for a day and night, left town last evennig for Hot Springs, Va., their favorite playground, for a brief holiday before returning to their home in St. Paul, Minn. Business brought Mr. Kellogg to town.

Plans for the wedding of Mrs. Kellogg's niece, Miss Laura Frances Ottis, to Mr. John Hammond Bradshaw, jr., will probably be announced shortly, as Mr. Bradshaw has recently joined his fiancee and her family in St. Paul. The two young people are at present members of a camping party in the northern part of Minnesota. Miss Ottis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Ottis, and Mr. Bradshaw the son of Dr. John Hammond Bradshaw, of Orange, N. J.

The Secretary of War, Mr. James W. Good, has returned from a trip to Minneapolis, where he attended the dedication of the Forshay Tower.

and Mrs. Douglas Thropp, of New York.

Mrs. Hamilton Wright and the Misses Barbara and Leslie Wright, of Washington, have arrived at the Burlington Hotel, London, England.

Miss Heloise Young Wed to Lieut. Hatcher.

Holy Trinity Church, in Georgetown, was the scene of a lovely wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Heloise Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Young of Mount Vernon, Va., and this city was married to Lieut. Robert Stetinius Hatcher, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Benton Davidson Hatcher, of Texas and California. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock by the Rev. Louis Weber. The church was decorated with banked palms, flowers and candles.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin, fashioned on princess lines, with a close-fitting bodice. The lace bertha was held by a pearl pin, worn by the bride's mother at her wedding. Her tulle veil was arranged cap fashion, held by orange blossoms, carried an ivory velvet French prayer book that belonged to her maternal great-grandmother.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Young, as maid of honor. She wore a frock of shell pink chiffon made with a deep bertha and the graceful dipping hemline. A small felt hat to match and pink slippers completed her costume. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Mackall, Miss Lucy Mackall, Miss Mary Elizabeth Thompson and Miss Elizabeth Thompson. Their frocks were of pale blue chiffon made like that of the maid of honor, with matching hats and slippers. Their flowers were also pink roses and delphinium.

Today's True Detective Story

By VANCE WYNN

The Vanceboro Bridge

ON the last day of December, 1914, the Vanceboro Bridge, connecting Canada and the United States, was dynamited and partially destroyed. It was evidently a German war plot, but for a time the manner in which it was destroyed and the identity of the culprit were a mystery. The span is not a long one, but it had great commercial value and its destruction was a serious matter.

The case was considered of such importance that Bruce Bielaski, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, hastened to the little Maine town in order to give it his personal attention. It is not necessary to tell of the agitation and the perplexity which ensued before the police got a clue that led to the detection of those who were responsible for the outrage.

The first hint of the truth came from a boy who had seen a stranger alight from the train at the station on the previous evening. He said that it was a tall, awkward, light-complexioned man and that he carried a suitcase. The boy was attracted to him by the undecided way in which he stood on the platform and looked about him. Finally, he made his way to a woodpile on one of the sidings and concealed his suitcase. After that he walked over to the Vanceboro Bridge and made an examination of the structure.

Another witness was the inspector at the immigration station at Vanceboro. That official said that he had met a man answering the description of the boy coming from the direction of the bridge. He demanded to know who he was and the stranger with a childlike grin, said that he was Olaf Hoorn and that he was a Dane. The inspector was not acquainted with the Danish language, but the man's odd way of expressing himself indicated that that part of his story might be true. The inspector wanted to know what he was doing in Vanceboro, and the stranger said that he thought of buying a farm in that locality. He added that he had come from New York by way of Boston.

That was two links in the chain. The third came when it was ascertained that a man giving the name of Werner Horn had registered at the Vanceboro Exchange Hotel on the previous evening. The following day one of the employes of the hotel entered his room for the purpose of cleaning up. In doing this he found it necessary to move Horn's suitcase, and marveled at the great weight of the baggage. Later Horn paid his bill and announced that he was going to Boston on the 8 o'clock train. He marched out of the hotel, smoking a big cigar and carrying the heavy suitcase.

Most astonishing of all, after the explosion the proprietor of the hotel hurried to the basement of the house to see if the boiler had exploded. It had not. On his way upstairs he found Horn in the bathroom running the hot water. He betrayed no confusion whatever, but said he had frozen his hands and wanted to know what he should do about it. In the end this artless person was taken into custody, and, when all of the evidence was marshaled against him, made a complete confession.

He calmly admitted that he had dynamited the Vanceboro Bridge and said that he had done it for the sake of the Fatherland!

The story he told was one of the most amazing of the war. It involved members of the German Embassy at Washington, stolen passports and intrigue which sounded more like fiction then truth. But it was only too true. The public feeling against Horn ran very high and it was only the calmness of the United States officials that prevented a lynching on the spot. He was tried and convicted and sent to the penitentiary. His sentence was comparatively light, on the ground that he was a tool of those "higher up," and that in his work of destruction he had so timed his explosion that no lives were lost. In doing this—in so arranging his 30-minute fuse—Horn not only gave a sop to his conscience, but ran a serious personal risk.

Shortage of Suicide Placed at $92,184

Bond of Georgia Bank Head Covers Loss, Directors Say in Report.

Columbus, Ga., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The board of directors of the Columbus Bank & Trust Co., today authorized announcement that accounts of Vice President Henry B. Crowell were $92,184.43 short when he ended his life last Wednesday night.

A statement to depositors, shareholders and patrons said $100,000 of Crowell's bond had been paid into the bank pending a final settlement with securities companies. The shortage, it was said, has been confirmed by auditors who have been going over the bank's accounts for several days.

The vice president's body was found in the back yard of his home shortly after midnight. A bullet wound through the head and a nearby pistol led to a verdict of suicide.

Cuts—Sores apply Cordshell's All Healing Salve

"I have known Cordshell's Ointment for thirty years, having used it personally, and also having had many opportunities to observe its effects when used by persons under my professional treatment.
"The results of its application have always been satisfactory, not only in cases of slight abrasions of the skin, but also in many very obstinate cases of chronic ulcerations. It is clean and soothing in application and conducive to healing.
"I believe it to be free from injurious constituents, and from what I know of its effects I can recommend it as a safe and efficient remedy for any nonmalignant ulceration of the skin.
"Very truly yours,
"D. J. REINHART, M. D."

Schneider Course Viewed by Wales

Prince Sees Two Planes Which Are Air Hopes of Italy and England.

Calshot, England, Sept. 3 (A.P.)—Togged in flying kit, the Prince of Wales today had a preview of the Schneider Cup race course between the English mainland and the Isle of Wight where the international speed test for seaplanes is scheduled to be flown Friday and Saturday.

"I'd love to have a flip in her," said the air-minded heir to the British throne, when shown the Italian Fiat flyer, said to be the smallest and fastest seaplane ever built.

The prince talked to the members of both the British and Italian cup teams.

The prince flew over the course in a royal air force flying boat. Later he watched the S-6, the plane with which Britain hopes to retain the trophy, drawn from its hangar and tuned up.

The prince was let into the secret of the speed which has been attained by the British planes which will race, being the only person in the world, outside the privileged circle of engineers and mechanics, who has this information.

125 Are Transferred From Ft. Leavenworth

Leavenworth, Kans., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Evacuation of the United States Army disciplinary barracks here preliminary to converting the prison into a civilian penitentiary was continued today with the sending of 125 inmates to Fort Hay, N. Y.

Thirty-six guards accompanied the prisoners.

Crime Commission Begins in Earnest

Members of Crowd Return From Summer Recess; Experts Named.

(Associated Press.)

The National Law Enforcement Commission will begin in earnest today the most intense analysis of crime conditions and law observance ever undertaken in the United States.

With preliminary details out of the way and the foundation for the survey laid, the twelve members of the commission will return from the summer recess prepared to enter actively upon the legislation which has been divided into eleven phases. Four experts already have been appointed to assist in the studies, in addition to the University of Chicago, which will make a survey of criminal justice and the foreign born. Other experts are to be chosen shortly to facilitate the work of the commission.

A year or more is expected to be required before the commission presents its findings, and George W. Wickersham, the chairman, does not expect the stage of public hearings to be reached for several months.

Two Plane Passengers Die in Crash; Pilot Safe

Kansas City, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—C. B. Adsit, 48, and E. Warren Gotwals, 30, both employed by the Missouri Highway Engineering Department, were killed today when an airplane crashed at Commercial Airport, near here.

Willis Young, 32, who was piloting the plane in which Adsit and Gotwals were passengers, was not seriously injured.

"My! you look lovely to-night"

SHE knew the compliment to be true—for the last pimple had vanished.

If you are one of the embarrassed—and men are not exceptions—with skin blemishes that linger, and sometimes leave scars, you must realize that the logical cause may come from the blood.

A clear, smooth, velvety skin bespeaks loveliness. Men admire it. Women praise and secretly envy. Hope, joy, happiness, and even love, may depend on the possession of a clear, unblemished skin.

On the other hand—skin eruptions are outward evidences of the condition within. Authorities state it is an indication that the body's power of resistance to disease and infection is low. Meaning, that there is a deficiency of red-blood-cells.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

Made from fresh vegetable drugs—

When you get your red-blood-cells back to normal, that sluggish let-down feeling, loss of appetite, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again and you sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady. You are resistant to diseases.

S.S.S. is Nature's own tonic for improving the appetite, building strength, and clearing the body of so-called skin troubles, by increasing the red-cells of the blood.

Radio - Wire Body Fought By Lawyers

American Bar Group at Present Not in Favor of Communications Commission as Planned by Senator Couzens.

While taking a stand neither for nor against the creation of a communications commission as proposed by Senator James Couzens, the standing committee on radio law of the American Bar Association is opposed to the establishment of such a commission at present, a report of the committee made public yesterday reveals. And in view of the fact that it will probably be a year or two before the Couzens bill could possibly become a law, the committee believes that it behooves Congress to remedy some of the serious defects of the radio act of 1927 until a new act replaces it.

The report — approximately 100 pages in length and one of the longest ever filed with the bar association — will be submitted to the fifty-second annual meeting of the organization of lawyers at Memphis, Tenn., on October 23. The committee was created at the 1928 annual meeting in July at Seattle.

As the subject of radio law promises to be one of the liveliest topics of debate at the October meeting, according to the committee, an open meeting will be held by the compilers of the report on the first day of the convention, so that the bar members will be able to get such further information as they desire to enable them to determine their vote on the recommendations.

The report comes right on the heels of the proposals for changes in the radio act of 1927 and the Couzens bill from Bethel M. Webster, general counsel of the Federal Radio Commission, who addresses his suggestions to Senator Couzens and the committee on interstate commerce, which has been conducting the communications hearings to determine the need for a communications commission. In many recommendations the two are similar.

In so far as the report covers defects in the radio act of 1927 and its amendments, it recommends the following:

The complete repeal of the much criticized provision of the act, which divided the country into zones, and also of the Davis amendment of March 28, 1928, by which the commission was required to allocate all broadcasting facilities equally as between the zones and fairly and equitably in proportion to population as between the States in each zone.

The complete repeal of the anti-monopoly provisions of the act contained in sections 13 and 17. The report states that "section 13 is a constant threat to the foreign communication system of the United States;" that it makes it possible that a large proportion of the invaluable short wave channels which the United States has appropriated and assigned for use by American companies may at any time "be thrown back into the international grabbag open to registration of other nations." Section 17, according to the report, "rests upon a misconception as to the nature of radio reception and its relation to wire communication;" the two means of communication should be permitted to combine under proper conditions and such combination will be to the advantage of the public.

The complete repeal of section 21, which now requires the obtaining of a construction permit before construction of a radio station.

The immediate termination of the existing uncertainty and division of authority in radio administration in the United States by placing radio regulation definitely and permanently in the hands either of the Federal Radio Commission or the Department of Commerce.

A mitigation of the drastic provisions of the act with regard to the issuance of licenses to corporations having alien stockholders, particularly with respect to ships, aircraft and the like.

Improvements in the provision covering procedure and hearings before the commission.

Amendment of the act so as to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to judicial functions and so as not to permit it to substitute its judgment for that of the commission on matters involving principles of radio engineering and the like; also to give parties the right of appeal who do not have such right under the present statute.

An immediate return to the original license period of three years for broadcasting stations and five years for other stations and, in any event, at least a one year license. Under the present law, due to amendments in 1928 and 1929, broadcasting licenses are limited to three months, with the result that a very difficult administrative situation is created as well as a lack of stability and of certainty which licensees have felt as to the duration of their privileges.

The report is virtually a textbook on radio law and its development since the publication in 1927 of the only existing comprehensive treatise on the subject, written by Judge Stephen B. Davis, former solicitor of the Department of Commerce.

The members of the committee are as follows: Louis G. Caldwell, chairman, Chicago, Ill.; William J. Donovan, Washington, D. C.; Fred C. Fernald, Boston, Mass.; Cassius E. Gates, Seattle, Wash., and Edward A. Zimmerman, Chicago, Ill.

Wall Street Echoes.

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—A party of travelers arrived in Wall street. The roar of riveting machines used in construction of several new skyscrapers, filled the narrow thoroughfare. "This is Wall street, where tickers abound," proclaimed the guide, and one of the party replied: "They make more noise than I thought."

Lincoln to Be Sketched Over Radio

WRC Will Launch Program Tonight With Lyric Famous Challenges; WMAL Features Mystery Play.

A new program will make its bow to the audience of Station WRC at 6 o'clock when a coast to coast network of 45 National Broadcasting Co. stations is joined for the Lyric Famous Challenges. The new feature is the first of a series of weekly dramatic sketches, sponsored by the All American Mohawk Co., of Chicago. The sketches will be based on important incidents in the lives of history's greatest figures, opening with an incident in the life of Abraham Lincoln. How, as a young lawyer, Lincoln accepted a seemingly hopeless case and won his client's acquittal of a murder charge by the use of an almanac will be dramatized tonight.

Next week a turning point in the life of Francois Villon will be depicted. Others to follow include Napoleon, Verdi, P. T. Barnum, John L. Sullivan, Mark Twain, Gen. Ulysses Grant, Alexander Hamilton and Andrew Jackson.

Another new broadcast will be the MacFadden Red Seal Hour from WMAL and the Columbia Broadcasting System, at 8 o'clock, when "The Clue of the Black Dragon," a mystery of Chinatown, will be given. Among the artists to be heard in this dramatization are William Podmore, long identified with the theater as a member of English and Shakesperian and repertory companies, and last year with Katherine Cornell in the "Age of Innocence"; Conrad Cantzen, who played in "Shanghai Gesture," and who, as Prince Guiderius in "Cymbeline," held Margaret Mather in his arms when that star died during the death scene; and several other well known actors and actresses.

A symphonic program made up entirely of Tschaikowsky compositions will be broadcast as the Mobiloil concert at 7 o'clock from WRC. The orchestra, under the baton of Erno Rapee, offers the finale of Tschaikowsky's "Fourth Symphony" which has a very quick tempo and finishes with termendous energy. Adelaide De Loca, contralto, will feature his "Ye Who Have Yearned Alone."

A half hour program of old and new dance favorites will be broadcast by the Troubadours at 8 o'clock, including a medley from "Hollywood Revue of 1929, an Oriental medley, from "The Little Show," a waltz group, "Gypsy Dream Rose," closing with a medley of Vincent Youmans songs.

The Palmolive hour will be heard at 8:30 o'clock. Following "Amos 'n' Andy" at 10 o'clock, the following program of Slumber music will be broadcast:

"Poet and Peasant," von Suppe; "Liebestraum," and Second Rhapsody, Liszt; "Menuet in G" Beethoven; "In a Monastery Garden," Ketelbey; "Solvejg's Song," Grieg; and "Meditation," Bach-Gounod.

An hour of dance music will conclude WRC's broadcast.

Willard Amison, John Barclay, Helen Oelheim and Josephine Conveny will be heard with the Rollickers during the Voice of Columbia program at 7 o'clock from WMAL. Vocal and orchestra selections from five operas will be heard during this broadcast.

The Kolster Radio Dance Orchestra continues its policy of presenting music in the vogue, a special arrangement of semiclassical numbers in dance tempo and one new number, during its broadcast from WMAL at 9 o'clock. The feature of the program will be "There Must Be Someone Waiting For Me In Loveland," the theme song from the motion picture, "Glorifying the American Girl."

Negro spirituals and other songs especially favored by the intensely religious colored folk of the old South will be heard during the Dixie Echoes broadcast at 9:30 o'clock. "Hallelujah," "Roll de Chariot Along" and "Gimme dat Ol' Time Religion" are the better known numbers in this program.

The Edith Reed Entertainers will be featured from WOL at 6:15 o'clock, followed by Lisette Follmer, contralto. The station will be on the air from 7 to 10 o'clock this morning to broadcast a regular program.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Separate Vacations.

WHAT would you do if your lord and master suddenly announced over the morning rolls that he would like a short vacation from your most amiable company?

Would you be hurt, angry or utterly relieved? If this crisis has ever presented itself to you, you will sympathize with Paula in her astonishment. Paula, you see, does not know just what a wife's reaction ought to be under such unexpected pressure. Like most wives, however, much she herself may secretly welcome relief from too much of one human's society, she would rather have originated the motion herself than have merely the seconding to do. What would you do in Paula's place? Of course, opinions will differ, and differ widely. But present your opinion after reading Paula's letter. Do you believe her husband really is a bit bored, really tiring of her? Or is his statement merely the result of frankness, even at such a time and in such a mood? Will Paula lose him or regain him by allowing him a month's vacation from her? What should Paula do? Please get your replies in promptly as his vacation starts in two weeks.

Dear Miss McDonald: I really do not know whether to be worried or mad or glad—or what. I have been married only two years, and yesterday at breakfast, my husband, who has acted a bit absent-minded about me for some weeks, suddenly suggested that we take our vacations apart. He put it in such a way that it was impossible to argue about it or refuse. So I just said, "All right." But is it all right? Is it right for him to be bored with me in two years? I am never bored with him. Why is he bored with me? Should I be worried? Is he losing interest in me? Personally, I do not mind the vacation apart, as I do long to visit my people, and they could not spare us a room if we went together. This way I can room with my two kid sisters, visit my school friends and have a wonderful—if a bit lonely time. But as a wife—not just a person—how should I feel? Was it right of him to ask this? Another thing, if he is getting tired so soon of marriage, am I taking a terrible chance in giving him this opportunity to go off alone in bachelor fashion? He is going with two other men who are single. Will they be annexing girls, and will this aggravate his dissatisfaction with marriage? We have never quarreled, he is generous and sweet, and I love him. What do you make of it? PAULA.

We will tell later what we make of it—but meanwhile we want other wives to answer Paula and comfort or advise her.

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help all who read this page. Express your views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

"Parking With Peggy"

"Uncle Bob says we're soon coming to the time when any marriage that lasts that long will be an eight-day wonder."

Dare Interprets the Mode

Loveliness of taffeta expressed in print—white leaves on a red background. (Courtesy of Louiseboulanger, Paris).

WE are just beginning to appreciate what grave and far-reaching consequences for the mode went with the abandonment of the low waistline and the adoption of the normal position at the waist. For changing the waistline meant changing the entire silhouette, and now that the high waistline has definitely found favor with the world's elegantes, that evolution of silhouette is going ahead rapidly and fearlessly.

A season or two ago the couturiers were hesitantly providing a sort of camouflaged double waistline—one at the hips and one at the waist. That period is ended.

So confident are they now of the success of the high waistline that they are emphasizing it, concentrating on it, building an entire new mode around it.

One charming instance of this, which we saw recently (and we have seen others of the same order since) was on an evening gown, which had its modish little sleeveless jacquette, and peeping out from beneath it a brilliant sash, wide and intricately draped.

This sash was very much in the Oriental manner, like that worn by the Zouaves, and its effect was to accentuate in the extreme the high placement of the waistline.

In other instances, the waistline is high-lighted by lavish embroidery, in colored beads or of strass, sometimes narrow, sometimes wide—but always charming!

Louiseboulanger and lovely ladies! For this is the couturiere who can design garments that are feminine without being frilly, elegant without being fussy. In the lovely robe de style illustrated for you today, of red taffeta with printed white leaves, one sees the master hand—it would have been so easy to have made it look like grandmother's kitchen tablecloth, 'member? But it certainly looks like anything else but!

By the way, is your own room just another bedroom—or is it a lovely lady's boudoir? Want to make it a fitting background for your loveliness—with delightful shelves, cunning curtains and matching—oh, well, why not send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post and work out these little new ideas for yourself? There's a helpful leaflet waiting!

Oh, dear, dear, she may put them in a jardiniere for room decoration!

WORK ON BRIDGE

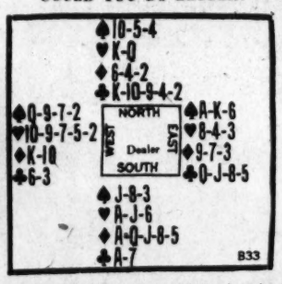
Bridge Brevities, a pamphlet by Milton C. Work, the world's pre-eminent authority on Auction and Contract Bridge, free.

This valuable pamphlet, containing concise suggestions for players of both games, will be sent with the compliments of this paper to readers of Mr. Work's articles who request it.

Requests must be addressed to Milton C. Work, care of this paper, and must include a stamped (2c stamp) self addressed return envelope.

Read Mr. Work's articles on Auction and Contract. Everyday exclusively in The Washington Post.

COULD YOU DO BETTER?



THE bidding of the above hand at Auction Bridge would be: South one No Trump followed by three passes. At contract it would be: South one No Trumps, North two No Trumps, South three No Trumps; East and West passing whenever it was their turn to declare.

The hand was played in a game of Auction Bridge, but the play would have been identical had it been Contract. West's original lead was his fourth best Heart which dummy took with the Queen. South played his small Heart. Dummy then led a Diamond which closed hand finessed and West won.

West then realized that South must hold the Ace and probably another Heart, so he abandoned the hope of establishing his Hearts and tried Spades. East and West won four Spade tricks which, with their one Diamond, saved game. Could Declarer have avoided this catastrophe?

THE ANSWER.

It is impossible to say whether Declarer could have won his game or not; but he need not have neglected his one opportunity to do so. He should have realized that if he lost the necessary Diamond finesse it would be to West; and that if West then switched from Hearts to Spades, game would be gone. So he should have practiced a little deception.

If South had played his Jack of Hearts under Dummy's queen on the first trick, it would have left his ability to take three Heart tricks unimpaired, and might have made West think that South had the Ace of Hearts alone so that another lead of Hearts would clear the suit. If West won the Diamond trick and led a second Heart, game would be won easily by the Declarer.

Lighter, Cooler...

than sanitary protection has ever been before

KOTEX is so light, so cool, so dainty, that women forget to dread the need of sanitary protection! Even summer cannot affect its wonderful comfort.

Kotex never loses its softness. It simply cannot pack. Many air-cooled layers of Cellucotton absorbent wadding keep Kotex light and cool though worn for hours. It actually absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture!

Kotex gives complete protection—without a trace of bulk! Rounded, tapered corners keep it inconspicuous, though worn with thinnest summer frocks . . . the deodorizing process is doubly comforting in summer . . . instant disposability means so much. The layers of filler can be adjusted to suit individual needs. Try the new Kotex. It offers a world of comfort!

KOTEX IS SOFT . . .

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.

2—Safe, secure keeps your mind at ease.

3—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

Where Cork Comes From

ONE of my rules is, "When you are through with a bottle of ink, put the stopper on tight!" That rule grew out of a little tragedy some years ago when the ink from a bottle went exploring in the wrong places.

Algerian natives beside cork tree. Below, a strip of cork tree bark showing how corks are punched out.

Stoppers for ink bottles, and for other bottles, are usually made of cork—in whole or in part. If it were not for corks, the world would have to change some of its ways.

I suppose you might think me joking if I said that corks grow on trees. That would not be exactly true, but it would be fairly close to the truth. Cork is a kind of wood, and grows as bark on trees in Spain, Portugal and other countries.

The cork tree—which is a relative of the oak—has a very thick bark around its trunk and on the larger limbs. This tree grows to a height of only 30 or 40 feet, but it trunk sometimes measures 5 feet from one side to the other.

At the age of 20 years, the cork tree is ready for its first stripping. Long slabs of bark are taken off, and the trunk is left so bare that you might think the tree would die; but if the stripping is done properly, the inner bark not being hurt, the tree will live. Ten years later, the owner will be able to strip off the bark again.

Cork trees live 300 or 400 years, but after they get to be 150 years old, their bark is seldom of much value. The average tree gives off about 45 pounds of cork; but one tree with a huge trunk yielded 500 pounds at a single stripping.

After being boiled, the cork slabs are cut into strips and sent to market in bales. There are machines which cut corks for stoppers.

Besides its uses to keep bottles and jugs from spilling, cork is employed in making life-preservers and for the inner soles of shoes. No doubt you have walked on cork "rugs"—the substance known as linoleum is made from powdered cork mixed with linseed oil.

What Today Means to You

SEPTEMBER 4.

"VIRGO."

IF September 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from noon to 3 p. m., and from 7 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 a. m. to 8:45 a. m., and from 4:30 p. m. to 6:15 p. m.

The influences for this date do not favor progress or business transactions. Financial resources will be drawn upon to excess. An elderly member of your family or some close connection may be the cause of temporary difficulties.

Children born on this September 4 will be interested in intellectual pursuits, even in their recreations. They will enjoy sports and games, especially those of an out-door variety. They will be good judges of human nature, and will seldom be deceived.

You have a most positive character and there are few who react to its force with indifference—you are greatly admired or heartily disliked. Most all neutral or negative people worship at the altar of your independence, while those of your own type are often jealous competitors. Liked or disliked, you always dare to be yourself, and to express your views in a candid manner—you are never somebody else's shadow.

There is a great deal of tenderness, sweetness and affection in your nature, although this is often hidden by your brusqueness. Your love is more the "mother love" than the sensual, and you are always ready to shield those who are anxious to receive your hovering protection. Your paternal or maternal instincts are highly developed, and you would fight for your offspring with a blinding love, and an uncontrolled fury. You are a true friend, and a relentless enemy. You are only attracted to those who are your intellectual equals. Wealth and position mean nothing to you, unless accompanied by character and intelligence.

Your mind is keen and brilliant, and you are extremely proud—the best only suits you. You take considerable pains with your personal appearance, and make the most of the gifts which nature has bestowed upon you.

Successful people born September 4: Charles T. C. Follen, educator. William B. Kinney, journalist. Phoebe Cary, poet. Daniel H. Durham, architect. Richard R. Bowker, journalist.

Making Pittsburgh's hills look easy! hardest

Brady Street Hill. 20 to 25½% grade

Going up Rialto Street Hill with twelve passengers

Filling up with AMOCO-GAS at one of the American Oil Co Stations, Pittsburgh

HARD, harsh words have been said about Pittsburgh's hills--but in a recent test a Studebaker President using AMOCO-GAS made them look easy!

Ralph Hepburn, a veteran automobile driver, took one of the Studebaker President roadsters on a tour of the hardest hills in and near Pittsburgh. The car had already been driven 63,522 miles--30,000 miles of that distance at far better than mile a minute speed. In that famous test at the Atlantic City Speedway--as in all of Studebaker's stock car record runs--AMOCO-GAS was used.

Yet, Center Avenue, Aspinwall, with a 21% grade was topped at 30 miles per hour with two passengers. Federal Street extension proved just as easy. Starting at 10 miles an hour the carefully checked speedometer showed 35 miles per hour at the top. Rialto Street hill with its sharp 27% grade was climbed with twelve passengers hanging all over the car--a human load of well over a ton.

South Negley Avenue, Waldbridge Street, Penn Avenue in Wilkinsburg, Tokio Street, Columbo Street--all proved easy for the Studebaker and AMOCO-GAS.

A great showing--a wonderful performance for a strictly stock car--and a strictly stock gas--AMOCO-GAS--the fuel that makes the toughest hills easy!

STOCKS MOVE DOWN FROM NEW UPSWING

Half-Hundred Issues Advance to Record Top Levels in Early Trading.

CALL FUNDS 9 PER CENT

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—With the bull party still in the saddle and riding still harder, the Stock Market entered the new month today, but progress became increasingly difficult during the afternoon, and before the close of the session some of the ground gained earlier in the day was lost.

More than half a hundred issues were hurled up 2 to nearly 10 points to record high levels, including such leaders as American Telephone, U. S. Steel, International Harvester, Chesapeake & Ohio and Southern Pacific. Recessions of 1 to 5 points from the best levels of the day were fairly general, however, when a wave of profit-taking swept over the market in the afternoon.

Trading was in tremendous volume during the forenoon, the ticker dropping nearly 20 minutes behind the market. The trading slackened up considerably as the upward movement lost force. Selling was attributed largely to fears that the advance, on top of the upturn late last week, was proceeding too rapidly, and weakening the technical position of the market. Fairly heavy calling of loans during the morning also caused uneasiness, but call money held at 9 per cent.

Some Traders Become Cautious.

The credit outlook was a factor, turning some traders into the paths of caution. Report of still another shipment of more than $1,000,000 in gold from London made an increase in the Bank of England's discount rate seem even more probable at the weekly meeting tomorrow, and some apprehension was expressed lest the Federal Reserve take further action to restrict speculative use of credit. In view of the recent banking comment on the ineffectiveness of the recent rediscount rate rise in keeping down brokers' loans.

Outstanding points in the day's business news were announcement that Montgomery Ward's August sales reached a new high record, 46 per cent above that month of 1928, and a report that one copper producer had raised the domestic price one-fourth of a cent, to 18¼ cents a pound. Automobile production reports for August varied, Chevrolet showing a substantial reduction, while Buick and Packard showed gains over the like month of last year.

U. S. Steel was again brought forward as a leader during the upturn, which it was pushed up about 4 points to a record price at 261¾, but it lost about two-thirds of its gain later. Youngstown Sheet & Tube rose 5 points to a new top, and the coppers generally responded to the red metal price increase. American Smelting up about 6 points to a new peak, above 129.

Utilities Hurled Upward.

Several of the utilities were hurled upward. American Water Works, American Power & Light, International Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey and Standard Gas & Electric reaching new high levels in wide gains. In the merchandising group, West & Co. and R. H. Macy mounted about 7 points each to new tops, but Montgomery Ward encountered profit taking on the August sales announcement and closed off a couple of points.

Vick Chemical, which has been comparatively quiet for some time, was in active demand, rising a couple of points to a new top. The dividend rate was recently increased, and changes in management as well as expansion plans were announced last week.

Food shares were a strong group. Corn Products, Fleischmann, Hershey Chocolate and Kraft Phenix reaching new peak prices. Other shares to reach new peaks included Air Reduction, American Type Founders, American Bank Note, Commercial Investment Trust, General American Tank, Otis Elevator and Union Carbide.

Rails Turn Irregular.

Rails turned irregular. Alleghany Corporation, Reading and Norfolk & Western sold up 2 to 7 points to new tops, while Atchison, New York Central and Nickel Plate lost 2 to 5 in profit taking. United States Freight, which has had a sharp rise since its recent listing on the "big board," tumbled more than 7 points.

Oils were generally inclined to ease, with such shares as Standard of New Jersey and Texas Corporation losing off a point or so. American & Foreign Power, Canada Dry, Columbian Carbon, General Electric, Procter & Gamble and Westinghouse lost 2 to 4 points, and Sloss Sheffield Steel dropped about 4 points, to a new low for the year at 49.

Cotton was a feature of the commodities, rising 70 cents to $1.25 a bale on continued dry weather. Bullish weather reports also caused firmness in corn, but wheat lost a cent or so a bushel on reports of rain in Argentina and a downturn in the market at Winnipeg.

Foreign exchanges were steady. Sterling Cables rallying to $4.84 25-32.

HOMANS GAINS TIE WITH JONES FOR GOLF MEDAL

Nats Hammer Morris, Beat Sox, 10-5

Judge Hits Homer, 2 On, in Triumph Over Boston.

Marberry Holds Foes in Check Until Last Two Innings.

Special to The Washington Post.

FENWAY PARK, Boston, Mass., Sept. 3.—The Nationals hopped all over Ed Morris, big right-handed prize pitcher of the Red Sox, this afternoon, in the early innings and made five runs before the third inning was over and eventually won by the handsome return of 10 to 5.

The feature of the pastime was a home-run blow by Capt. Joe Judge into the right-field bleachers with two men on base in the sixth inning. After that frame Big Ed was seen no more. Ed Carroll finished for the Red Sox and was more effective.

Large Fred Marberry had an easy game for the Nationals, but he began to show signs of yielding to the unseasonably high heat and humidity—it is one of the hottest spells Boston has had in September—and in the ninth Manager Walter Johnson let Fred go under the cooling showers while Garland ("Lefty") Braxton stepped into the breach and did a great job of relief pitching.

Joe Judge Drives Home Four Runs.

Judge drove in four runs and Sam West and Ben Tate slapped across two apiece. The solitary National error was a boot of a grounder by Rice in right, but he more than made up for that by gallant outfielding on other occasions. In the second he raced in, stuck out his mitt hand down near the grass tops and speared a lazy loft off Regan's bat which had all those earmarks of being a fluky two-bagger. Buddy Myer gave his old Boston rooters, of whom there are many, a glimpse at some neat second-base play and he tripled and singled at bat.

Morris was rather soft for the Nationals at the start of things. Rice and Goslin singled to right in the first, Myer stuck in a timely sacrifice fly, West walked and Benny Tate struck a single into left and two runs were across for the Nationals.

Two more runs eventuated in their second on Hayes' single, Marberry's bunt, a wild pitch, doubles by Judge and Goslin and Rice's sacrifice fly. West triple to right and Tate's single to the same terrain in the third gave the Nats their fifth run.

Red Sox Net a Run by Rally in Fifth.

Not until the fifth did the Sox wake up. In their half of that period they slapped over a run on Big Ed Morris' single, Reeves being hit by a pitched ball, a walk to Scarritt and an infield out. The bases were loaded with one out, but Marberry & Co. saw to it that there was no big inning.

Singles by Cronin and Hayes in the sixth set the stage for Joe Judge's homer, which just barely cleared the right field corner, carrying into the bleachers with the help of the wind, and adding three more to the Nationals' tally.

Marberry Yanked in Ninth With Bases Full.

Three runs tumbled into the Sox's laps in their eighth on singles by Heving, Gerber, Reeves, Rothrock and Bigelow, mostly scratches, and a fumble by Rice in right of Reeves' grounder. It made the tally—Nats, 9; Sox, 4.

The first of the ninth saw singles by Goslin and Myer, a boot by Gerber at short and an infield out give the Nats their tenth and last run of the matinee.

In the Sox's last chance, Todt and Heving opened with singles. Pinch Hitter Ruffing fanned, but Pinch Swinger Berry walked. This jammed the bases and Manager Johnson went out, took the ball away from Marberry and had Garland Braxton finish. Reeves' long sacrifice fly to Goslin scored Todt but Myer made a good play on Scarritt's grounder and forced Berry at second with a wee toss to Cronin. Finale—Nats, 10; Sox, 5.

Penn Placing Grid Hopes On Opekun, Diminutive Back

Stolid Lad From Coal Regions Expected to Fill Scull's Place by Quakers; Coach Young Admits Prospects Pleasing.

This is one of a series of stories dealing with football prospects at leading institutions. Others will follow from day to day.

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—On the broad, squat shoulders of Wallie Opekun, a short-coupled chunk of bone, muscle and power from the coal mining regions, rest Pennsylvania's hopes this fall for an all-conquering football team.

For Wallie must carry the burden that Paul Scull, one of the greatest backs in Pennsylvania's history, lugged so lightly last fall in Penn's triumphant sweep through the pigskin warriors of Harvard, Chicago, Lehigh, Penn State, Columbia and Cornell. Only the middies of Navy, by a single touchdown margin, stopped Scull and his mates in the 1928 campaign.

Fine Material Available To Fill Gaps.

And without any show of cockiness, Penn today is going about the business of building a potential champion, confident that Wallie Opekun will do even more for the university than did Scull in 1928. To fill the back field gaps left by the departure of Scull, Johnny Shober and Paul Murphy, the graduations of Leon Westgate, a great center, and John Smith, mammoth tackle, Head Coach Lou Young has some of the finest material he ever has seen at Penn.

A squad of hard-hitting, hard-running backs have come up from the crack 1928 freshman team to help Opekun, Mort Wilner, Dick Gentle, Walter Masters, and Al Ratowsky, all back field veterans. Where Young had but two good ends last year, Joe Olexy and Sid Gervin, now juniors, he now has a pair of incoming sophomores, Tanswer and Riglett, who may replace them. Capt. Utz is back at tackle, Magai and Kuen at guards, and material for the vacant spots is large and plentiful.

Young Sees Back Field as One of Greatest.

"Taken as a whole," Young says, "Pennsylvania never had better prospects. The back field may be one of the finest we ever had. Opekun is a better passer than Scull—fast, a good plunger, marvelous interferer, fearless and rarely hurt. Gentle, hurt last year, has the stuff to develop into another Ned Mahan. We have ends at last and a strong line."

The highlight of the Pennsylvania schedule is the intersectional duel with California at Franklin Field October 19.

Yankees Bow To Athletics Again, 10-2

Earnshaw Yields But 4 Hits; Stretch Lead to 14½ Games.

Pipgras Battered Out in 1st Inning; Sherid Also Pounded.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The farewell appearance of the Yankees in Philadelphia this season, which took place today, resulted as had too many of their previous appearances here, for the Athletics carried off the game by the score of 10-2. Thus the Macks stretched their lead in the pennant race to 14½ games.

George Earnshaw, very effective and hampered only by his own wildness in spots, let the Yankees down with four hits, three of which for extra bases. Lou Gehrig got a home run and a double, and Cedric Durst, a triple. The other hit was a single by Tony Lazzeri.

Gehrig's homer was his twenty-ninth of the season. Babe Ruth was quite helpless before Earnshaw, twice going out on strikes and twice being thrown out by Max Bishop.

George Pipgras, knocked out in the third inning of the morning game yesterday, was sent back at the A's in an effort to confound them today, but it proved to be only another noble experiment.

Hoyt's Good Pitching Is Too Late.

This time the Athletics got to him in even quicker time, knocking him out in the first inning. Roy Sherid, who was his successor, yielded four hits and as many runs in the three and a third innings he pitched, and then was removed for a pinch hitter, whereupon Waite Hoyt came in to pitch.

Hoyt was nicked for only one run, but his good pitching came too late to make any difference.

From the three Yankee pitchers the Athletics made a total of nine hits, in which were included home runs by Jimmy Dykes and Bishop.

Pipgras had disposed of only one hitter when the blow fell upon him. Bishop fouled to Dickey, Haas walked and Cochrane singled to center. Simmons hit the score board on the fence in right center for two bases and Haas and Cochrane crossed the plate. Simmons reached third when Durocher threw Foxx out from deep short in a rare play, and scored on Miller's single to right.

Then Dykes parked a poke in the left field stands and scored behind Miller. It was at this point that Pipgras vanished and Sherid came in from the bull pen to take his place.

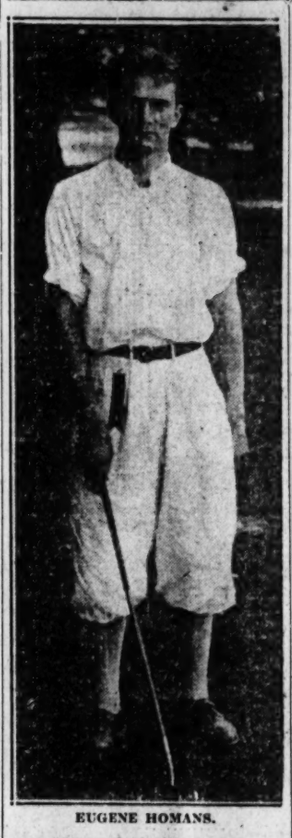
Baseball Czar Plans To Make Record Trip

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, made arrangements today to make the fastest trip on record between Boston and Louisville. He has an appointment in the Massachusetts town at noon tomorrow and another in Kentucky the next day. He expects to travel by plane and train over the distance that is 1,093 miles by rail route in 21 hours.

Taking a colonial plane from Boston at 3:35 (Eastern Standard time), tomorrow afternoon, he will reach Newark in time to take the airway limited of the Pennsylvania, which will land him at Port Columbus Thursday morning. The Transcontinental Air Transport will carry him by air to Indianapolis, where he will take a plane for Louisville.

Commissioner Landis planned the fast journey to be present at noon Thursday at the finals of the American Legion Junior Baseball League.

PRINCETON GOLFER SHARES HONORS WITH NATIONAL CHAMPION



EUGENE HOMANS.

78—147. The Los Angeles youth at no time was in danger of repeating his record performance of the opening day, losing control of his tee shots and on several occasions narrowly escaping disaster on the ocean's brink.

Jones, in the double-barreled encore of yesterday's main act, shook off his youthful rival from Southern California, but was unable to outshoot the consistent Princeton star, Homans, whose father was famous on the gridiron for the Tigers.

The champion, again trailed by the biggest gallery, had an 8-foot putt on the home green for a birdie 4 that would have given him undisputed possession of the lead. He missed it, however, by a wide margin just as he had lost opportunities on any number of greens. It was the third time in his career that Jones has figured in a tie for the qualifying medal. The Georgian, who has won the title four times in the last five years, was deadlocked with Fred Wright, jr., of Boston, at the Engineers Club in 1920 and again, in 1923, at Flossmoor, with Chick Evans, of Chicago. Jones won the medal outright in 1926 at Baltusrol and at Minikahda in 1927.

Dunlap not only lost his gallant bid for the low scoring honors, but was beaten out for third place by two stars from the Pacific Northwest, the veteran Dr. O. F. Willing and youthful Donald K. Moe, Western amateur champion, both of Portland, Oreg. As they did on the first day, Dr. Willing and Moe duplicated each other's scores and were tied with 72—74—146 apiece, just a stroke behind the leaders.

Moe Falters Near Finish To Tie For Fourth.

Moe's finish, where he had a chance on the last few holes to wrest the lead from all rivals, was one of the most dramatic of the day. Among the last to finish, the young Oregon ace missed easy putts on both the sixteenth and seventeenth and was on the edge of the 540-yard home green in two, missing his chip for an eagle by so narrow a margin that his birdie 4 was easy.

Scores were sent soaring by the wind that added to the terrors of Pebble Beach and it took cards of 160 or better to get within the select circle of 32 qualifiers who begin the match play, man-to-man battle tomorrow for the championship. Two eighteen-hole rounds will be played and by tomorrow night the field will be cut to eight.

The casualties, under the conditions, were not as heavy as appeared likely when the high scores began to roll in but the list of victims included Chick Evans, of Chicago, the two-time former champion and a finalist as recently as 1927. Evans missed out by only a stroke, taking 81 yesterday and 80 today for 161.

Voigt Among Notables to Avoid Elimination.

Others to fall by the seaside were the two Canadian entries, Ross Somerville, with 162, and Don Carrick, with 169, both former holders of the Dominion title; Fred Wright, of Boston, with 163; Frank Dolp, of Portland, Oreg.; Bon Stein, of Seattle, and Keefe Carter, of Oklahoma City, all former holders of the Western amateur crown, and all finishing with 163; Jack Neville, the California titleholder, who played with Jones, had 168. D. Clarke Cockran, of Philadelphia, medalist in 1924, compiled 172, and Sam Perry, of Birmingham, Ala., the Southern champion, put himself out with 173.

There were a number of close calls as well as a scattering few comebacks among the favorites. George Von Elm, of Detroit, 1926 champion, blew himself to a bad 82, but his 75 of the previous day saved him a safe total of 157. Phillips Finlay, of Redlands, Calif., former Harvard player, reversed this process and came back with a 75 today after starting 5-5-7 and an 82 of the previous day, also totaling 157. George Voigt, of New York, the 1928 medalist whose 80 of yesterday put him on the ragged edge.

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Tommy Loughran, through his manager, Joe Smith, notified the New York State Athletic Commission today that he is surrendering, without reservations or conditions, his title as light heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

The Philadelphia boxer's manager then requested that the commission recognize the winner of the Loughran-Jack Sharkey fight as world's heavyweight champion. This was turned down, whereupon Smith asked that the bout be designated as for the American championship. He was again refused.

FLYING HEELS WINS BELMONT NURSERY IN DRIVE

Hi Jack Close Second to Favorite

Winner Draws Away in Last Sixteenth to Score.

Gone Away Is Only a Head Back of Second Horse.

BELMONT RACE TRACK, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Gifford A. Cochran's Flying Heels, favorite in the betting, at 11 to 5, scored in a drive in the Nursery Handicap, 6 furlongs, down the Widener course here today. It was a brilliant race the son of Flying Ebony ran to land the $6,200, which went to the winner. G. D. Widener's Hi Jack was second, and W. Ziegler's Gone Away was third. The start was good, and when the field came into full view it appeared as if three different horses had alternated in the lead.

When the field was abreast of the grand stand, Jack Campbell was in front, but Flying Heels was closing gamely. The latter drew out in the last sixteenth to win by half a length. Hi Jack took the place by a head over Uluniu Wins Feature at Lincoln Field.

Lincoln Fields Race Track, Ill., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The colors of Mrs. R. S. Pollard were carried to an easy victory here this afternoon in the Hotel Louis Joliet Purse, the feature attraction, when her Uluniu crossed under the wire two lengths in front of Ben Marshall, from Mrs. D. L. Kieffer's Stable. Mrs. E. Denmark's Frances Milward was a close-up third. Only six started. The mile was covered in the fast time of 1:37. The race had a net value of $1,150 to the winner, $294 to the second, and $171 to the third stables.

Uluniu, away well, was reserved off the pace for the first half mile then moved forward to take the lead entering the stretch and win with much in reserve by two lengths. Ben Marshall, away fast, was taken into the lead and held on well to the stretch turn, where he was headed. He finished gamely to take the place by half a length from Frances Milward. The latter ran a good race to take the small end of the purse by a length and a half. Uluniu, heavily played, paid $4.80 for $2.

Large Fields and Close Finishes Mark Racing.

The card today, with the exception of the feature event, was largely composed of claiming affairs, and what it lacked in quality was made up in quantity, the various numbers being well filled and resulting in several close finishes. The weather continued clear and the track was fast.

SOUTHERN ELEVENS PLUNGE INTO EARLY TRAINING

Fine Outlook At Most of Camps

Alabama's Chances Depend on "Flash" Suther, Back.

Ga. Tech, Minus Five Stars, Is Problem for Coach.

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—The first call for football sounded in Dixie yesterday with decks cleared for action in a dozen or more Southern conference training camps.

Some of the schools delayed rehearsals until after the Labor Day holiday, but most of the coaches took advantage of the weather to get right down to business.

Coach Wallace Wade, whose Alabama Crimson Tide is expected to be an outstanding conference contender, anxiously awaited a report on how well "Flash" Suther's broken collarbone has mended. Suther, a speedy back, was out of commission practically all of last season and the Alabama chances this year depend largely on his return to the backfield.

The first dress rehearsal saw nineteen letter men doing their stuff at Tuscaloosa and the wily Wade smiled a wise and knowing smile.

As the Flying Squadron of V. M. I., gathered at Lexington, Va., Coach Bill Raftery found he had a letter man for every position and three extra monogram backs, but he refused to pick his squad on the basis of past performances.

Alexander Mournful At Georgia Tech.

After looking over a Georgia Tech squad minus such bell ringers as "Father" Lumpkin, demon full back; Pete Pund, all-American center; Bob Durant, field general and Frank Speer and Raleigh Drennon, line stars, Coach Bill Alexander mournfully announced that the Golden Tornado would be outweighed in every game it plays this year.

Night rehearsals under large arc lights were ordered for the Tulane Green Wave by Coach Bernie Bierman who said Banker & Co. would do very little daylight prepping because of the heat.

The grizzled Dan McGugin welcomed a Vanderbilt squad for the twenty-sixth consecutive year at Nashville with the announcement that with mostly raw material to work with, mostly lectures on fundamentals and less rough work will be the order of the day.

Sixteen North Carolina letter men and a number of frisky sophomores were scampering about the lot at Chapel Hill, N. C., but unfortunately Coach Chuck Collins' roving eye failed to light on a badly needed tackle or two.

Many Vets Return to Clemson, Virginia U.

The barrel-chested Josh Cody had more experienced men than he could conveniently count in the squad of 82 which turned out at Clemson and ten "C" men were in the big assortment of talent which greeted Earl Abell, the new coach of the Virginia Cavaliers.

Despite the preseason groans of Maj. Bob Neyland, practically the same squad which carried Tennessee through the 1928 season undefeated showed up at Knoxville. Nineteen letter men included Hackman and McEver, the twin terrors of last year.

The football field at Auburn looked like a mobilization camp during the war with 100 candidates of every size and description out hustling to try to put Auburn back in the Southern Conference. If there is strength in numbers Coach George Gohler is sitting pretty.

At North Carolina State more than a dozen regulars failed to answer when the roll was called, so Coach Gus Tebell called it a second time just to be sure and then called his sophomores to the other end of the field.

The lean and astute Billy Laval wore a poker face as he watched his South Carolina Gamecocks go through their paces at Columbia without Beall, Wolfe and other 1928 headliners. He may not have so much material, but he will have the usual bag of tricks.

Washington College Lists 8 Grid Games

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 3.—Four games have been scheduled abroad and four at home for the Washington College Football Team, with one date not yet filled. Meanwhile, J. Thomas Kibler, athletic director, though not hopeful for a bang-up gridiron squad believes his material may be whipped into shape sufficiently well to make a creditable showing. The squad will be light and since the schedule is also light it is believed an even break may be anticipated.

"Chief" William P. Beatty, of Long Branch, N. J., former University of Maryland star and line coach here last year, will be on tap to assist Kibler.

Dopson, Alexander, Norris and Krause will be seen in the back field again. This quartet did yeoman service last season against superior odds in the way of weight. Bobby Cavanaugh, former back field ace and now coaching Pennsylvania Avenue High, of Cumberland, will send down a few prospects, he has told Kibler. One of them is Hoffman, a back field scholastic star.

The schedule follows:

September 28, University of Maryland, away; October 5, Susquehanna University, away; 12, Loyola College, Baltimore, home; 19, Swarthmore College, away; 26, open. November 2, Drexel Institute, away; 9, American University, home; 16, Baltimore University, home; 23, Mount St. Mary's College, home.

Virginia Gridmen Work Out in Heat

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 3.—With the mercury registering its highest point of the summer, 98 degrees, the candidates for Virginia's varsity eleven wore less clothes this afternoon than the modern flapper.

Twenty-nine players, headed by Capt. Johnny Sloan, of Richmond, reported to Coach Abel for the second practice of the day. Veterans in uniform included Byrd, Taylor, Turner, Flippin, Faulconer, De Butte, Ivey, Levy and Gravatt. Letter man scheduled to arrive tonight include Motley and Day, guards, and Whalen, tackle.

Linemen working out today were Myers, Dunn, Williams, Fuller, Peyton, Lankford, McEwing and Lee, while the backs included Sippley, Goldenburg, Pinder, Wilkins, Robertson and Clarke.

Thomas, Bryant and Lewis formed a trio of promising backs from last year's freshman team.

fought his way around in 78 this afternoon and aggregated 158.

Mackenzie Clips Par on Outgoing Nine.

Roland Mackenzie, brilliant young Washington, D. C., player with a 72 to work on, began his second round with a sparkling 35 for the outgoing nine, one under par. A birdie 4 on the 502-yard sixth, where the wind has full sweep, enabled him to clip perfect figures.

Mackenzie, due chiefly to one bad hole, finished his second round with 76, giving him a total of 148. On the 555-yard fourteenth, the Washington star hit his second out of bounds, missed the green with his next shot, finally got on in five and took three putts for an eight.

All three members of the British contingent remained, to keep the international flavor in the tournament Cyril Tolley, the British champion, put his third shot into a tree bordering the home hole and took a 7, but finished his two days' work in 75—78—153, well within the fold. T. A. Bourn, with 80—77—157, put on a rally, but his countryman, Eustace F. Storey, found all kinds of trouble and barely made the grade with 76—83—159.

Homan Avoids Trouble With Steady Play.

Homans, former Metropolitan champion, got an early start on the field this morning, and with careful, steady golf set the pace, his two-day total of 145 representing only 1 stroke over par on this difficult course.

Georgetown Grid Grind Starts at Ocean City Camp

By JACK ESPEY.
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Sept. 3.—Under benign weather conditions which served to heighten their spirits, the Georgetown University football players went vigorously into the task of conditioning for the 1929 gridiron campaign here today.

Forty-nine players reported to Head Coach Lou Little and took a workout of two hours and a half on the Ocean City Municipal Athletic Field, which will be the scene of their training stunts from now until September 15.

As a whole, the Hilltop squad looks fit and ready for a battle. Only here and there could an ounce of excess weight be detected. Summer jobs in the out-of-doors have kept most of the candidates in fine physical trim. All were eager to get into action and were on the field shortly after 2 o'clock. From then until 4:30 they went through a program of running, calisthenics and simple fundamentals. The session was just hard enough to bring out a good sweat and Coach Little excused them with the promise that the real grind will commence tomorrow.

Little Promises Squad Plenty Of Hard Work.

Little gave the players a talk and stressed the necessity of being prepared early for the coming schedule of nine games, four of which are of major caliber. "You're going to get plenty of hard work," he told them in a positive tone. So the boys and Trainer Harry Crowley tonight were contemplating the usual series of chest pains and other ills accompanying preliminary football training.

Lou Little is a believer in arduous practice as the means of gaining successful results. The Blue and Gray mentor reminded his pupils that their prospects this season are better than those of 1928, but he added in the same breath that it is up to them to make a better record.

"We have been knocking at the door of an undefeated season for several years now, and it looks to me as if we will get there this season if everybody will do his bit," Little said. Every one of you must do your bit for the team and sacrifice personal glory. It's the personal sacrifice which will do more than anything else to give us a perfect machine."

Morning, Afternoon Sessions Start Today.

Only one of his assistants, John "Ox" Degrosa, line coach, was on hand to help Little at the first drill, but the other two, Mike Palm, back field coach, and Herb Kopf, in charge of the ends, checked in before nightfall.

Commencing tomorrow, both morning and afternoon sessions will be held. Scrimmages with Temple University at Atlantic City will open early next week, Little advised the squad.

Only about a half dozen more players are expected to report. Among them is Hal Meenan, of the varsity basket ball team. Meenan was out for football in 1927, but was injured, and now hopes to regain a place with the varsity pigskin chasers. He is an end, ideally built for that position.

Capt. Jim Mooney, the husky Chicago product who did some of the best punting in the East last year, looks to be in splendid condition. He spent most of his time today in helping the coaches with the rookies. After the regular drill he indulged in a little punting and got away a number of his best. Following is a list of today's player arrivals:

Capt. Jim Mooney, Phil Mooney, Bill Mooney, John Scalsi, J. Hannegan, S. Stephes, Paul Liston, George Slater, Edward Katalinas, William Slezak, Sullivan, R. Brennan, P. Paulette, Kenneth Provincial, Bill Montanis, G. Anderson, C. Muir, J. Leavey, Georg Homiak, T. Wallace, Gabril Murphy, Ray Gehringer, C. McManus, R. King, R. Flood, R. Tremblet, N. Morris, J. Hornyak, J. Bantsul, J. Coppola, C. Brinckman, J. Murphy, C. Walsh, G. Pendergast, William MacZeez, Francis O'Harin, John Hudak, G. Donaldson, J. Daily, Leroy Bordeaux, Gene Driscoll, Johnny Bosek, Emil Bosek, Maurice Dubofsky, Joe Zimeski, Ed Leary, Joe Gardiner, Sam Corovana and R. Gannen.

POLY COACH SEEKS NEW BACKS

Grid Squad in First Drill of Season at V. P. I.

BLACKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Close to two score football candidates at Virginia Polytechnic Institute pranced into the rays of a burning September sun here today to gird themselves for another of Dixie's gridiron wars. Graduate Manager Salty Miles turned the boys loose on the first of their two new practice fields with acres in which to roam and toughen tender sinews.

This new practice ground, part of V. P. I.'s new recreation field, will answer to a dozen more pairs of cleated shoes before Saturday when the last of the late arrivals should be safely in the fold. Andy Gustafson and Lee Frank, former Pitt stars, are again at the coaching reins and slow to make any sort of predictions as to what the Gobblers will do this fall.

Backfield Presents Biggest Problem to Coaches.

Gustafson is scanning the horizon eagerly for backs and laments the passing of the mighty Frank Peake, along with Mattox, Looney and McArthur, the other fleet riders of the pony express. These boys bore the attack for three years and their loss is sure to take dynamite out of the Polytechnic offense. "The backs," said Gustafson today, "are the biggest problem. We lack back field talent needed for a tough campaign like that ahead of us. We have capable back field men, but not enough of them."

From last year's varsity squad Hooper, Owens, Rule, Wood and Baker are available, with McEver, Rice and Tomko from the 1927 team. All started the grind today except Rice and McEver, from whom no word has come.

Famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"What a satisfaction it is to put a Cremo to your lips," says Alfred W. McCann—"You know a Cremo is safe.

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. And every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along every step of the way.

"Each Cremo is folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions! In factories that are models of cleanliness . . . air-flooded, sun-bathed, scientifically clean!

"And to protect its purity until it reaches your mouth, each Cremo is sealed in a separate foil wrapper.

"So when you smoke a Cremo, you get the same scientific health protection that comes with certified milk!"

How often have you been disgusted with the filthy, germ-breeding places where some cigars are made . . . dark, stuffy factories . . . warm, dingy shops and windows . . . where cigars are rolled by careless, dirty lips and fingers and spit on the ends! What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

The superiority of Certified Cremo starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported Sumatra wrapper! Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. MARY DELLA

A Serial Story

By JULIE ANNE MOORE.

MARY DELLA CHUBB—The best looking clocker in the clock shop, if not in Waterbury. Lives with her parents in a Bank street flat.

MIRIAM BOBBIN—Limited in S. A., but Mary Della's best girl friend; also a clocker.

JOE SPEAKS—Mary Della's steady, young man about town, good-looking and hard-boiled.

ROBERT HENLEY CALKMAN 3d—Yale senior and football star; one of the Calkmans of Detroit.

GEORGE McKRAY—He wanted to go to Harvard, but the cards were against him; also a senior at Yale. Happy-go-lucky is George.

MARJORIE MARABEE—Daughter of fashion, living on Cracker Hill; fiancee of Robert.

TIMMY FITZMOAN—Petting is his specialty. In love with Mary Della.

OLGA SVENSON—Also a clocker and not too popular with any one.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The final dress rehearsal of "The Clock Shop Clockers" was an extremely corpulent evening. It was an exhilarating experience for Mary Della, a thrill for Timmy Fitzmoan, and a riot for Miriam. But one thing at a time.

To begin with Timmy appeared in his affectionate tuxedo and was promptly instructed by Younger Brett to rent one two sizes larger before the show and to wear it only in the roadhouse scene. Until now Timmy had imagined himself the last gasp in sartorial elegance when embraced by the tuxedo, and this frankness on Brett's part was a blow that threatened to deprive the musical comedy of its leading man.

But Mary Della took command of the situation and assured Timmy that stage tuxedos were always exaggerated to emphasize the effect. And then Timmy raised a new bulwark and asked whoever heard of a leading man in any scene without a tuxedo. Which indicated that Timmy had been specializing on Adolph Menjou.

Eventually, however, everything was agreeably arranged and the rehearsal got under way.

Standing in the wings, waiting for the chorus to do its first song, Timmy sidled up to Mary Della. "Uncle Jack let me borrow his car tonight, Mary Della," he confided in a whisper. "Want me to take you home when we get through?"

Mary Della wanted very much to say yes. She knew the implications of the invitation from Timmy, but she knew too that she could save him from his one great weakness. And there was something about the boy that attracted her, something refreshing after the staccato worldly-wise manner of Joe Speaks. But it was Joe whom she feared in her relations with Timmy. He had seen them go into the pavilion together that night at Hamilton Park, and that same night he had suggested that he would have no mercy on a discovered rival. "If I ever catch any bozo running around you——" It was Timmy's welfare, she thought, not her own.

"I'm sorry, Timmy," she said at last, "but not tonight. Don't ask me to give a reason."

"Aw, gee! You dont' treat me right, Mary Della. You said the other night you could love me without half trying, and now you won't even let me take you home."

"Listen, Timmy." Mary Della caught the lapels of his jacket and pretended to remove a vagrant hair from one of them—— "I'd like to go but I can't. But why don't you ask Miriam. Miriam likes you plenty, Timmy, and she's a peach of a girl if you only knew her."

"Miriam's all right," Timmy agreed. "Think she'll go?" No enthusiasm here.

"Of course she will."

Brett called for the leading lady to stand by and gave the chorus a last warning against what he described as "grand stand stuff" when they ought to be playing up to the leads.

Everything ran off smoothly and at 11 o'clock Brett declared that "The Clock Shop Clockers" ought to take the town by storm.

"It's nifty," he said, "even if I did write it. Be back stage early tomorrow evening, and keep your nerve. Good night."

Timmy and Miriam were the first to leave the hall. They slipped out while the others were getting on their coats and chatting noisily about the impending performance.

"You're a dear, Timmy, to take me home in your car," Miriam declared. "And such a gorgeous night to ride home in, too. What a shame I don't stay out in Watertown or Thomaston so we wouldn't be there in such a hurry."

Timmy hadn't expected this assistance to his plan, and he quickly took advantage of it.

"What's the sense in going straight to your room, Miriam? It's early yet. How about a little spin out the Thomaston road? We'll be back in an hour."

"Isn't that a scrumptious idea, now! You sure do know how to drive, Timmy."

"Oh, it's easy to drive a car," Timmy said modestly. "Sit a little closer, Miriam, and it'll be warmer for both of us."

Miriam moved over nervously. Something told her this apparently innocent ride was likely to prove interesting before it was over. She wondered if this first suggestion was a part of a program, or did Tommy really mean it about being warm?

They rode out by the ball park, across the bridge over the railroad tracks, and on along the narrow road toward Waterville, talking about the show, the weather, the pleasure of riding at night when the traffic was light. In the revealing lights of the village, Miriam leaned far over to her side of the car, but when they had left Waterville behind, she once more moved to the left until Timmy began to find it difficult to employ his right arm on the steering wheel. This program he solved by giving over the wheel to his left hand and putting the right arm about Miriam's shoulders.

Miriam was somewhat startled by this maneuver, but she argued that there could be no possible objection to a young man resting his arm on a girl's' houlders if a girl sat so close he couldn't ues that arm in operating the car.

Nor did she feel that she had cause for protest when Timmy's hand clutched her shoulder and drew her slowly but firmly to him, though she could almost hear the thumping of her frightened heart.

But when Timmy turned into the Greystone road and came to a stop around the first bend, Miriam experienced a sensation she was not likely to forget. Here she was parking with a young man, and she hadn't the first idea what was expected of her. If she met his advances coldly, he would put her down as either a snob or an ignoramus. If she acquiesced too readily——

Having quieted the engine, yanked at the emergency brake, and dimmed the lights, Timmy once more put his arm about Miriam and drew her to him.

"Nice and cozy out here. Like the country, Miriam?"

"I—I think so, Timmy—sometimes." Miriam squirmed uneasily. 'Say, what are you so fidgety about?" Timmy asked. "Didn't you ever park with a fellow before?"

Miriam decided that the safer course was to tell the truth, though she was tempted to claim a long and profitable experience.

"I've never even been out with a boy before, Timmy," she confessed.

"And you've never been kissed by a fellow either?"

"A boy kissed me once at a birthday party when we were playing post office, and I slapped his face."

"You must of been a little kid then," said the sophisticated Timmy. "Would you slap my face if I kissed you now, Miriam?"

"Timmy . . . Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" She scrubbed a cheek with the back of her hand. "Maybe you think that's funny, but I don't and don't you do it again."

"Gee willikins! What are you getting sore about? I just kissed you on the cheek. That's nothing. A kiss is just half a kiss unless it's on the lips."

"It that right! And what's the difference whether it's on the cheek or on the lips, I'd like to know? A kiss is a kiss."

"That's where you're wrong, Miriam. You'd know better than that if you'd ever been kissed right just once. Don't ask me why because I don't know the answer, but I know it's so and that's enough for me. As for me, personally, I'd rather kiss my landlady smack on the lips than to peck Bebe Daniels on the cheek all winter. Oh yes, Miriam, there's a difference."

"Well, I don't care," Miriam said saucily. "You ought not to kiss a girl at all without asking her permission. You ought to know—Timmy! Stop it! Stop it, Timmy!"

"How was that, Miriam? Any better? If you wouldn't struggle so, I might be able to give you a real kiss, but with your fingers gouging my eyes out, my style's badly cramped."

"If you do that again, Timmy Fitzmoan, I'll get right out of this car and walk home. Who do you think you've got in this car anyway? I'll have you know I'm a lady whether I look it or not"

"Can you imagine it?" Timmy asked in great surprise. "Getting sore just because I made out like I was going to kiss her. Why, Miriam, when I really mean to kiss a girl, I don't play around like that. I settle down to business."

Miriam drew herself up. "Well, you'd better not settle down to business with me, or you'll be sorry for it. I never saw anybody behave so in my life. I didn't think you'd pull any cave-man stuff like that with me or I wouldn't of come out here. The idea of kissing me twice when you knew I wouldn't like it."

"But I didn't know you wouldn't like it, Miriam. Golly Moses, I've seen a lot of funny girls in my time, but you sure do act the funniest. Anybody'd think you weren't like other girls, Miriam. All girls like to be kissed, don't you know that?"

Miriam wasn't sure, but she gave the idea free run. Perhaps all girls did like to be kissed like Timmy said. Well, was she like other girls or not? Of course she was. She hadn't had much opportunity to kiss before tonight, but it hadn't been because she wasn't willing.

Yes, she suspected Timmy was right, and before everything else she wanted to be like other girls, to have a fellow, and go riding as she had tonight and have wild stories to tell at the shop.

"It's not that I don't like to be kissed Timmy," she explained clumsily, "but—but I don't like to be grabbed at and kissed before I know what's going on." She decided that this speech was not half bad, but she was afraid Timmy would take advantage of it too readily.

But Timmy appeared not to have heard her. "You know, Miriam," he said, "I think you're a darn nice kid Mary Della says you're a good sport and I believe her. Don't you like me a little bit, Miriam?"

Miriam rubbed a finger over the oil gauge glass and dropped her head to one side.

"I like you a lot, Timmy. But I didn't think you liked me. Are you kidding?"

"Of course, I'm not kidding!" Very positive. "Sure, I like you, Miriam. Only it's more than that. I—" (Timmy was playing his ace) "I love you, Miriam, I though you knew that."

Miriam shook her head slowly. "No—I didn't know—that, Timmy." She wondered why she hadn't known, but the thought that Timmy could be reciting a favorite line did not occur to her. "I'm terribly glad, Timmy."

Timmy held her head back gently and put his lips on hers.

Time out.

"Ummmm, ugh, ummp! Timmy! I couldn't breathe Timmy——" She dropped her head on his shoulder and held his hand between hers——" It is nice, isn't it, Timmy?"

Timmy chuckled. "Do you still think a kiss is a kiss?"

She shook her head. "Timmy—will you—kiss me again?"

Timmy was nothing if not accommodating. But after a time Miriam called for a rest period.

"Timmy," said Miriam, irrelevantly, "what would you do if the Red Mask should show up about now?"

"Do? I wouldn't do anything, Miriam. What makes you afraid of the Red Mask?"

"Don't ask foolish questions. Didn't he kill a woman out on the Cheshire road?"

"Did he?" asked Timmy. "But suppose he did. Don't you think it might have been a case of have to? I don't know any more about it than you do, Miriam, but I've got a hunch the Red Mask's not a bad sort if you knew him."

"Well, of all things! You're the first person I've heard trying to defend him, Timmy."

"I'm not defending him. I'm just giving the devil his dues. But let's change the subject."

"Suits me," said Miriam. "It's time we were gong back now."

MARKET FOR BONDS DULL AND LISTLESS

Few Convertibles Advance to New Highs; Rails Move Narrowly.

FEDERAL LOANS REACT

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Resumption of trading in bonds after the holiday interval found the market steady, but listless today. Traders who earlier in the summer had predicted that Labor Day would see the beginning of a revival of interest in the long-dormant fixed - charge security list were forced to revise their opinion, for standard investment bonds gave little or no indication that a rise was in sight.

The Associated Press combined average for 40 rails, industrials and utilities moved up slightly during the dull session from the low it established last Friday, as compared with the almost steady recession during the latter part of August. General sentiment, however, continued unfavorable in view of the impression that time money, which was held at 8¾ to 9 per cent for the past fortnight or more, would probably remain firm in the immediate future.

Convertibles, which reflect the trend of the stock market, responded to the advance in shares and a few new highs were scored. American Telephone 4½s sold up to 224½. International Telephone 4½s rose to 224. Public Service of New Jersey to 280, and Southern Pacific 4½s, with warrants, to 99¾, all new peaks. Atchison 4½s and both issues of Alleghany Corporation 5s equaled their previous peaks. Most of the convertibles, however, closed below their maximum prices, although they showed nominal net gains for the day. Trading in all issues but the American Telephone Debentures and the Alleghany Convertibles was in light volume.

Standard railroad bonds ruled irregular in a narrow market, but gains and losses were about equally divided. The stronger issues included Central Pacific 5s, Chicago Great Western 4s, Delaware & Hudson Refunding 4s, Lehigh Valley General 4s, Pennsylvania 6s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s, and Seaboard Florida 6s. Texas & Pacific 5s, series C, touched the year's new low of 94¾ before recovering for a small net gain, while St. Paul adjustment 5s lost ground after a feeble exhibition of strength.

Industrials and utilities lagged, although some of the latter, notably Laclede Gas 5s and New York Telephone 6s, advanced on moderate buying.

The United States Government issues opened in higher ground, but some of the gains were lost in the later trading and the close was irregular. Liberty fourth 4¼s changed hands to a considerable extent, moving within narrow price limits. The foreign list was extremely dull and featureless.

WEEK'S BANK LOANS DISCLOSE DECLINES

Shrinkage Also Reported in Investments and Net Demand Deposits.

STOCKS AGAIN ACTIVE

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Declines for the week of $18,000,000 in loans and investments, $80,000,000 in net demand deposits, a gain of $46,000,000 in time deposits and a small decrease in borrowings from Federal Reserve banks were shown yesterday in the Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in 101 leading cities on August 28.

Loans on securities increased $12,000,000 at all reporting banks, $42,000,000 in the New York District and $6,000,000 in the San Francisco District and declined $33,000,000 in the Chicago District and $10,000,000 in the Cleveland District. "All other" loans show a small increase for the week, a reduction of $8,000,000 in the Boston District being offset by increases in most of the others.

Holdings of United States Government securities fell off $11,000,000 in the New York District and $16,000,000 at all reporting banks, while those of other securities receded $11,000,000 in the New York District and $14,000,000 at all reporting banks.

Net demand deposits, which at all reporting banks were $80,000,000 below the total of August 21, receded $38,000,000 in the Chicago District, $16,000,000 in the Boston, $12,000,000 each in the New York and Cleveland Districts and $6,000,000 in the San Francisco and increased $9,000,000 in the St. Louis District.

Time deposits increased $39,000,000 in the New York district and $46,000,000 at all reporting banks, while Government deposits declined $7,000,000. The principal changes in borrowings from Federal Reserve banks for the week comprise increases of $8,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and $5,000,000 each at St. Louis and Minneapolis, and decreases of $8,000,000 at Chicago, $6,000,000 at San Francisco, and $5,000,000 at Boston.

Stocks Active, Bonds Sluggish.

After the holiday, trading opened on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday with considerable activity in the stock division, but a sluggish bond market. One hundred and twenty shares of Federal-American Co. preferred sold at 100½, while a block of 50 shares of Commercial National Co. preferred changed hands at 103, and a sale of two shares of District National Securities preferred at 98, point recession, was also recorded.

Twenty shares of Capital Traction moved at 93½, five of Potomac Electric 6 per cent preferred at 112½, 20 of the 5½ preferred at 107, and ten of Lanston Monotype at 129⅜; 75 shares of Mergenthaler selling from 103¼ up to 103½. Fifty shares of Terminal Refrigerating & Warehouse Corporation were sold at 50½ and fractional advances. Sales of three shares of American Security & Trust Co., at 455, and five of Washington Gas Light at 130¼, were also recorded.

The stock sales total aggregated 360 shares, and the bond transactions, $3,200, were confined to transfers of $2,000 Georgetown Gas 5s at 100, $1,000 Washington Gas 6s, series A, at 101⅛, and $200 of the B series at 103¼ and 103.

Drought Hits Maryland Crops.

Maryland crops were being affected materially by dry weather last month, Chairman William W. Hoxton, chairman and Federal Reserve agent for the Fifth or local Federal Reserve District, reported yesterday in his agricultural review.

The report stated that peaches were not sizing up as expected and in some sections of the peach belt a moth was doing considerable damage. The apple crop is about equal to last year's but cantaloupes on the Eastern Shore of Maryland have been troubled with mildew which in many instances has caused vines to go to pieces before the fruit matured, thus affecting the quality of the melons.

The wheat yield is somewhat better than had been expected, but on the whole the crop was disappointing. There is every indication of a large tomato crop, the report shows, and prospects for the corn crop are generally encouraging.

Virginia crops declined slightly as a result of unfavorable weather conditions. As is usually the case, following wet weather in the first half of July, crops were unable to withstand the dry spell without suffering considerable damage. August is usually the important month in the groth of such crops as corn, tobacco, peanuts and cotton, so weather conditions during the next two weeks will largely determine the yield of these crops.

Threshing reports show that the wheat crop yielded very poorly. The crop was injured by rust and other diseases which developed during the wet weather and the quality was poorer than usual. The total production is estimated to be 9,126,000 bushels compared with 9,758,000 bushels last year. Corn prospects declined during July, the crop being damaged by hot, dry weather when most of it was just beginning to ear. The August condition indicated a production of 41,714,000 bushels compared with 44,715,000 bushels harvested last year.

Most of the hay crop was harvested in July and yields were very good. The growth of alfalfa was retarded by the dry weather during the latter part of July., so the third cutting will not be as heavy as the first two. The early potato crop yielded better than had been expected, but total shipments for the season will be only about 20,500 cars, in comparison with 27,307 cars shipped in 1928.

Virginia sweet potatoes promise an average yield, the crop being slightly earlier than last year, and commercial shipments in car lots have commenced. Fruit prospects declined slightly, there being little change in the apple forecast, but peach production will not be as great as expected, due to the Oriental peach moth and smaller-sized fruit.

Few Banking Connections Cited.

Nine out of every ten salaried workers in the cities of the United States have never established banking connections to the extent that they can go to a bank and obtain a personal loan in time of financial stress, according to Leslie C. Harbison, president of Household Finance Corporation, who has loaned more than $200,000,000 to workingmen in the last 30 years.

These loans, according to Mr. Harbison, average slightly more than $100 each and provide immediate cash, in the full amount, without fines, fees or deductions of any type, at the rate of 2½ per cent a month on the unpaid balance.

He has been unofficially associated with the Detroit Aircraft Corporation for several weeks and for a time acted as general manager of the Lockheed division which is located at Burbank, Calif.

Curb Review

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Efforts to bring about a resumption of the upward price movement on the New York Curb Exchange today encountered increased selling resistance, although pool operators succeeded in marking up more than a score of issues to new high records. Fears that the Federal Reserve authorities would take further measures to check the flow of credit into speculative channels coupled with the possibility of an increase in the Bank of England discount rate tomorrow, influenced profit taking on the part of several large traders.

Public utilities were again the center of speculative interest. Electric Bond & Share was marked up to another new high record at 186¾, but lost its gain, and American Superpower crossed 70, but also was unable to maintain its gain. American Gas & Electric ran up more than 6 points to a new top at 221½; Associated Gas & Electric A touched 67 for the first time and Electric Power Associates A ran up to a new peak at 73.

Deere & Co soared 30 points on a few odd-lot sales. Cord Corporation touched another new high at 36⅛ and L'Air Liquide, the French chemical stock, soared nearly 14 points to a new peak at 108 7-8. New highs also were registered by Cohn Hall, Lane Bryant, National Investors and Walgreen Co.

Except for the establishment of a new top by Imperial of Canada new, the oils showed little change. Recent price cutting in the metropolitan area has had a depressing effect on speculation in those issues.

In the investment trusts, National Investors was again a spectacular performer, surging up 28 points to a new peak at 260, contrasted to its price of 11 early in July. The Goldman Sachs issues were firm in the early trading, but ran into more selling before the close. It was announced that Blue Ridge's exchange offer for 21 leading "big board" stocks had resulted in the adding of about $16,000,000 worth of these issues to its holdings.

Guardian Fire Assurance mounted more than 3 points on report that first half earnings were equivalent to $9.80 a share, against $10.31 for the entire year of 1928.

Mining stocks were buoyant on report of an increase in copper prices. Newmont sold up nearly 12 points, Mohawk jumped 7 points to a new top at 62 and Noranda was in good demand.

Dubilier Condenser, which rose several points to a new high ground last week, encountered a wave of realizing and dropped 3 points to 16, but quickly rallied to 16¾. Aluminum Co. dropped 9 points.

The A. O. Smith Corporation of Chicago has received a contract from the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation for 96 helium gas storage tanks for use at the Akron Zeppelin field. The tanks are to have a minimum storage capacity of 1,000,000 cubic feet. THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Hope Plus — By George Storm

TWO ARE AS CHEAP AS ONE

The old saying that "two can live as cheaply as one" could be paraphrased with more truth into "Two automobiles are as cheap as one" . . . provided that one is a used car. The greatest factor of automobile cost is probably depreciation, and you can save wear and tear on a new car by using an inexpensive used car for business purposes and in adverse weather . . . Why not buy one of the low priced cars listed in the Want Ad columns of this paper today? One that will stand rough usage, that you will not bother to wash and polish so frequently and that you can allow the young folks to use without worrying about upholstery or marred finish . . . You will find such cars listed today on this page.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

SPEECHES ARE CHEERED

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 3.—The third day of the American Legion State convention was featured this afternoon by one of the largest and most impressive parades witnessed in Petersburg for many years. It was headed by a squad of motorcycle police and the Coast Artillery Band of 33 pieces from Fort Monroe. Mayor Ernest S. Jones, with his staff, was in command. In the parade were several hundred legionnaires who are here attending the State convention. The local post, American Legion, Petersburg Grays National Guard and the Hopewell Rifles, both of the 183rd Virginia Infantry Regiment, and Boy Scouts were also in line. Besides the band from Fort Monroe, there were three other bands and three drum corps, one from Alexandria and the other from Newport News, and that of Petersburg post. The parade was followed by hundreds of automobiles beautifully and elaborately decorated with flags and bunting occupied by members of the Legion auxiliary, Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of the Confederacy, Ladies' Memorial Association and members of A. P. Hill Camp of Confederate Veterans in Confederate uniforms.

5,000 See Parade.

It was estimated that fully 5,000 persons witnessed the parade. All along the line of the parade the marchers were cheered lustily.

The second day session of the State Legion convention opened this morning with addresses by James F. Barton, National Adjutant of the American Legion; Albert L. Cox, past departmental commander of North Carolina, and chairman of the National defense committee, and Miss Emma C. Pushner, National child welfare director, who is in charge of that work for the American Legion. Mr. Barton, in his address, told the veterans that Virginia posts will receive sometime this fall surprise calls to test their ability to answer promptly in a national emergency relief crisis. Mr. Barton stated that the call will go out over the National Broadcasting Co. hook-up about the time Col. Paul V. McNutt, National commander of the Legion, returns from the Fidac International Congress in Belgrade, Jugoslavia, scheduled for September 21. The call is to determine whether the Legion in Virginia and other States have working emergency relief units.

Legion Enjoys Success.

The proof of the Legion's freedom from partisan politics, declared Mr. Barton, lies in the fact that despite one of the most heated political campaigns in the history of the country last year the Legion has continued its steady, healthy growth in membership and in the success of its numerous and varied activities.

The Legion's national child welfare division and the various departments concerned had the opportunity successfully to urge laws which will give aid, care and equal chances to children in need.

Reports coming to the national Americanism division indicate that junior baseball has attracted from 300,000 to 500,000 boys this year. The junior world series this year will be played in Louisville, Ky., September 4, 5 and 6. The National Broadcasting Co. will report the world series, starting at 3 o'clock each day.

Mr. Cox advocated a proper and adequate defense and passage of a universal service act.

Child Welfare Plans.

Miss Pushner, national director of child welfare, urged a strong child's welfare organization in each State department, so as to keep families intact as far as possible, and urged the legionnaires to bend their efforts toward more adequate appropriations to help widowed mothers.

The emergency aid fund of the national endowment fund available is approximately $100,000, she stated, and of that about $90,000 is used for children's relief. Virginia has a fine public welfare department, Miss Pushner pointed out, but the need of relief for the widows should be fulfilled.

Robert Tolson, of the rehabilitation committee, spoke of the work conducted by that committee and the progress which has been made.

Mrs. E. B. Cameron, president of the auxiliary, carried greetings from the auxiliary to the convention. Standing dpartment committee reports were read at the morning session and a short musical program enjoyed.

Mrs. Pearl Davis Martin, soprano soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland Wright, sang two numbers. The Kiwanis quartet sang. They featured a song specially written for the American Legion by Mrs. Mary E. Sager, of Colonial Heights.

SLOW BLAZE RAZES MARYLAND FOREST

1,000 ACRES LAID WASTE

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 3.—Frederick mustered manpower today to combat the forest fire which has been sweeping through a portion of the Catoctin Mountains on the fishing preserve of Lawrence Richey, one of the secretaries to President Hoover.

Richey personally directed the fire fighters in combatting the flames on his property.

Forty men were this morning fighting the fire on both the watershed property and the Richey tract. Shortly after 3 o'clock this morning City Forester C. Cyrilklein sent a call to City Engineer E. S. Maxwell for additional men. The force of city street employes, taken to the scene Monday, returned to the city this morning for rest, while their places were taken by the 25 additional men sent out from here today. Mayor Culler and members of the board of aldermen conferred about the situation this morning. For a time it was thought that a fire engine might be of service in drenching the fire line and preventing the flames from leaping over them. It was learned that the fire was about 2 miles from the nearest water, so that the use of an engine would be impossible.

Approximately 1,000 acres have been burned, according to estimates of Klein. Most of this is undergrowth, the fire being principally on that portion of the mountain which has previously been burned. The fire is burning slowly, on account of the condition of the terrain.

Last night, from a position in a tree, where he was surveying the progress of the fire, Klein detected the display of a flashlight. A few minutes later a fire broke out at the same spot where the light had been seen. Fires have been burning at a half-dozen different places at the same time, it was said.

In addition to the force of men sent from the city this morning, ten others from Thurmont, in charge of Charles Eby, were also sent to the scene. These augmented a force from the mountain section, which has also been fighting the blaze. One of the difficulties confronted is to get food and water to the men fighting the fire. The scene is so isolated and progress through the undergrowth so slow that it is only with the greatest of difficulty that they can be reached. The city has been sending food and water to the men, and lunches and water have also been supplied from the Richy Camp. Water is being carried as far as 3 miles to the men.

Student Winner Of Unique Award

Brooklyn Man Is "Guest" of St. Johns College for Last Year.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Robert John Klingenburg, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is the first to receive St. John's College unique senior fellowship, by the terms of which he attends only such classes on lectures as he wishes, is free from fees and examinations, and can pursue the intellectual life in whatever manner he sees fit.

Award of the scheolarship to Klingenburg was announced today by the board of visitors and governors of the college, who announced in the spring the plan for this novel step toward complete academic freedom. The holder of the fellowship, which may be awarded each year to three members of the junior class, is virtually a guest of the college during his senior year, and is assured of his degree, whatever use he makes of his peculiar freedom. The only limitation is revocation of the fellowship for commission of a crime or because the fellow has become insane.

In announcing the chioce, it was pointed out as significant that although three elections could be made, the board had found only Klingenburg having the qualities justifying the distinction.

FAIR AT CULPEPER ATTRACTS CROWDS

Races Furnish Highlights of Annual Exposition on Second Day.

RIBBONS ARE AWARDED

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Sept. 3.—Crowds rushed the gates early on the second day of the Culpeper County Fair and the attendance was much greater than yesterday.

Premiums and ribbons were awarded in the live stock and domestic manufacture classes but due to the press of business the secretary's office was unable to furnish a list of winners tonight.

Following the usual county fair custom the races started shortly after dinner. In the first of these, the free-for-all half-mile, Rock Spa, one of Everhart Brothers' entries, finished first, but was disqualified for fouling Lady Leapress on the first turn. The judges gave the race to Mr. George, another Everhart entry.

In the mile event Rosie Jester got away in front but was overtaken by Frank Bennett's Ze Beegle.

The three remaining races went off without a struggle, the winners getting off in front and staying there.

The summary follows:

First race, half-mile, free-for-all—First, Mr. George, Everhart Brothers; second, Lady Leapress, Harry Quaintance; third, Paul Pry, F. W. Bennett.

Second race, one mile free-for-all—First, Zee Beegle, F. W. Bennett; second, Rosie Jester, Furr Brothers; third, Wardoway, G. S. Updike.

Third race, half-mile free-for-all—First, Rock Spar, Everheart Brothers; second, Mr. George, Everheart Brothers; third, Warrenton, Everheart Brothers.

Fourth race, steeplechase — First, Windover, Irvin Beavers; second, Knight of Greanna, Sunbright Farm; third, Rainbow, C. Y. Yancey.

Fifth race, half-mile for mules from Culpeper and adjoining counties—First, Jack, Irving Beavers; second, Jack, Smith Brothers; third, Pat, Oliver Fant.

C., will be presented as a candidate for president of the West Virginia division, U. D. C., at the annual meeting in Huntington September 25 and 26, it was announced today following unanimous indorsement of Miss Stribling by the local chapter.

CHURCH AND COUNTY SEEK TERMS ON LAND

Montgomery Factions Are to Meet in Effort to Close Deal for Courthouse.

COURT SUIT THREATENED

With both sides declaring that they are anxious for the early construction of the new Montgomery County courthouse and jail, the building committee and trustees of the Rockville Presbyterian Church have arranged for a meeting at which an endeavor will be made to iron out the differences between the two bodies, resulting from purchase negotiations for the church site.

The church trustees declare that they believe they should receive as much consideration as the Farmers Banking & Trust Co. and say that the church is prepared to carry its fight for a price which will at least replace the present church plant, to the highest court.

Meeting September 12.

The meeting will be held September 12 at the courthouse and will have the attendance of the entire courthouse building committee. In the meantime, Joseph C. Cissel and Charles W. Woodward, counsel to the commissioners, are preparing to file condemnation petitions against the church property.

The petition probably will be filed in Frederick, where Chief Judge Hammond B. Urner is located. It is understood that Judge Robert B. Peter is averse to handling the case as he is a member of the courthouse building committee. It is expected that Cissel will file the petition today. Should the meeting next week result in agreement between the building committee and the church officials, the petition will be withdrawn.

While county officials declare the church property is not worth the amount asked by the trustees, they admit that every effort will be made to prevent a fight on condemnation proceedings. Should such a battle materialize, it probably would result in delay of the building program for years.

Church Wants $42,000.

The church officials are asking $42,000 for the church property and the county offers $30,000.

The Rev. Henry K. Pasma, Ph. D., pastor of the church, yesterday declared that the congregation will be making a great sacrifice for the good of the community in accepting $42,000 for the property. He pointed out that the church has the best location due to the lack of a parking problem.

The present church has served the congregation since 1875, he said, and would serve equally as well for another 200 years.

"All of us want to see that courthouse," he said, "but up until now we have not been able to get together. As soon as we were asked to sell the property, we agreed if we could get another brick or stone structure as well equipped. We had the courthouse architect, Rossel Mitchell, draw up tentative plans of a building that would have the same capacity as the present church. Then we asked for bids and the lowest bid we received was $30,000, and later we found that Mr. Mitchell had left out several important features.

New Site Removed.

"Those features, together with several other items, such as a $2,000 architect's fee and furnishings for the church, would increase the estimate to about $7,000. The cheapest site we could find will cost us $4,000, and it is far from the desirable site that we now have, and is far removed from the center of town.

"The price we ask is the lowest at which we can replace our plant, and we believe the courthouse building committee has misunderstood the situation.

"The architect told us one thing and the courthouse committee another. He told the committee that the church could be rebuilt for $27,000, but he did not tell them of the other expenses such as the architect's fee and replacement of the church furniture. We think that when this is explained it will not be difficult to get together at the meeting. We do not want litigation and are anxious for the construction of the new courthouse, but we are not going to bow our heads to injustice."

Resident of Clarksburg Ends Life With Gun

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Leaving a note in which he asked that his funeral be held at an undertaker's so as not to disarrange the home, Grover C. Douglas, 36, a meat cutter, sat in a parked automobile this morning and shot himself dead with a shotgun.

Worry over unemployment and debt is the presumed motive. He leaves a widow and seven children.

WILSON BOULEVARD OPENS TO ROSSLYN

Arlington County Highway Repairs Completed at Courthouse Road.

FIRE AT MARCEY TOWN

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

All underground work by the county and public utilities along the Wilson boulevard is rapidly nearing completion and the barricades at the courthouse road leading to Rosslyn were removed yesterday. The road is now open to traffic from Rosslyn to Oak street in Clarendon. With the road open to this point there is but a short detour through Lyon Village by way of Virginia avenue thence back to the boulevard.

The pouring of concrete on the section known as Pickett's Hill, which will straighten the boulevard to the Military road, is about completed and it is understood that the contractor will have a force of men pouring concrete from Clarendon avenue toward Virginia avenue today.

Motorists using the Wilson boulevard from Rosslyn to Clarendon are warned to use care, as in many sections fills have been made.

Work on the Lee highway from the Military road to Hall's Hill is nearing completion and it is expected that work will be started from the People's State Bank this week.

Dr. William Mosley Brown, independent candidate for Governor of Virginia, will address the citizens of Arlington County in the Washington-Lee High School, Saturday night, at 8 o'clock.

Frank Lyon, State chairman of the Independent Democrats, will introduce Dr. Brown and preside at the meeting. It is likely other local candidates will be on the platform at the meeting.

Dr. Brown is campaigning actively throughout Virginia and in his talk Saturday night will discuss the issues before the voters in the fall election. He is directing his fight against the so-called "machine" of the regular Democratic party in the State and in his fight has the indorsement of both independent Democrats and Republicans.

J. Clyde Byars, acting chairman of the Eighth Congressional District of Virginia, is in charge of arrangements for Saturday.

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the property of Henry Anderson at Marcey Town, Arlington County, which was occupied by Charles Ashby, caretaker, yesterday.

Firemen from Clarendon, Ballston and Cherrydale responded, but owing to lack of water were helpless to do anything toward saving the property.

Damage was estimated at $2,000, said not to have been covered by insurance.

With the opening of the county public schools but two weeks off, Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, last night announced that no children will be vaccinated in the schools this year.

Parents are advised that their children may be vaccinated either at the offices of the health department at the courthouse or by their family physician.

The St. Agnes Episcopal School for Girls at Braddock, Arlington County, will open its 1929-1930 school term Wednesday, September 18, and not on Monday, September 23, as announced yesterday.

The executive committee of the Back-to-the-District Association will meet tonight at the home of the vice president, Richard L. Eacho, at Ashton Heights.

Many matters of vital interest to the association will be considered and all members of the committee are requested to attend.

The Clarendon Fire Department having exhausted all means to find a more suitable location for the new firehouse are still awaiting word from the county board of supervisors in accordance with their request that operations on the building be stopped until the county engineer might be able to find a more suitable location, according to a statement by the president, A. C. Putnam, last night.

"Unless the supervisors are able to find a better location and in view of their statement that they would not deliver the new American La France engine to the site selected by the department, the department is ready to turn over to the county the present equipment and let the county find a place for it," said President Putnam last night.

The board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce will hold its meeting tomorrow afternoon in the Rucker Building at Clarendon at 4:40 o'clock.

Waiving preliminary hearing to a charge of illegal possession, George P. Graves was held for the action of the grand jury by Police Judge Harry R. Thomas yesterday. Graves was later released on $1,000.

Charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, J. O. Bayne was held for the action of the grand jury by Judge Thomas. He was released on $500 bond.

John L. Pendleton, charged with reckless driving, was fined $34.25, including costs, while Ulysses Savage, on the same charge, was fined $25.25, including costs, by Judge Thomas.

Following a number of accidents at the intersection of Clements avenue and Garrison road, the latter a State highway, the question of having the county install an electric traffic light at that point was taken up by Supervisor B. M. Hedrick from Arlington District yesterday.

Supervisor Hedrick announced that he will consider the matter with the other members of the board.

Garrison road is one of the main detours to Falls Church and Fairfax during construction work now in progress along the Lee highway, and is today one of the heaviest traveled roads in the county.

Suit for a divorce was filed in the county clerk's office yesterday by Lorene S. Yost against Lester M. Yost.

Adopting the resolution offered by Thomas R. Mechem, delegates from the Lyon Park Civic Association, calling for an investigation as to the reasons for the drastic reduction in the salary of Harry Miller by the board of supervisors in the county water department, the Arlington County Civic Federation at its meeting held last night in the Lyon Park Community House referred the resolution to the executive committee for a report.

The report of the county clean-up campaign committee, of which George M. Yeatman is chairman, was read by the secretary and adopted.

ALEXANDRIA MEN HELD FOR HEARING

Inquest in Auto Tragedy Results in Decision to Arraign Them.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 123.

Following an inquest here yesterday, three Alexandria men will be arraigned before Judge A. C. Ritchie, at Fairfax Courthouse Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, for a preliminary hearing into the automobile accident August 25, in which Leon Cornell, of this city, suffered injuries which three days later proved fatal.

They are Kenneth Poole, driver of the machine in which Cornell was an occupant when it overturned on a curve near Franconia, while racing with another car, which failed to stop after the mishap; Marshall Frinks and John L. Kidd, one of whom police believe was the driver of the second car.

Testimony presented at the inquest, which was held by Dr. J. Marshall Jones, city coroner, failed to show that Frinks was the driver of the car, while several witnesses testified that Kidd admitted to them that he was the driver of the machine which caused the accident. Dr. Jones made no attempt to fix the blame in the crash.

A large delegation from the Masonic lodges of this city is expected to attend the ceremonies to be held at Old Chapel, Clark County, September 13, by the Grand Lodge of Masons in Virginia, when it dedicates a memorial at the grave of Edmund Randolph, first attorney general of the United States and a grand master of Masons in Virginia.

Senator Arthur R. Robinson, of Indiana, will be the principal speaker at the dedication ceremonies, while John T. Cochran, of the Plains, grand master of Masons in Virginia, will preside.

The marble tombstone that has stood above Randolph's grave for a half century, has been preserved by imbedding it in the grante stone of the new memorial and covering it with heavy beveled plate glass.

Mrs. Annie E. Matthews, 79, died yesterday at the home of her son, S. B. Conner, 410 North Columbus street, after a short illness. The body will be removed to Medford, N. J., tomorrow for funeral services and interment. Mrs. Matthews, who was a native of Philadelphia, is survived by two sons and three daughters.

Workmen yesterday began the task of digging up the tracks of the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Electric Railway Co. on King street, from Royal to Patrick and on Henry to Fayette streets so that new ties and rails can be installed before the city resurfaces that section of King street.

Grace Episcopal Church Circle of the Kings Daughters will meet tomorrow night at the church to plan for the State convention of Kings Daughters to be held here October 15 and 16.

The razing of two brick store buildings at 604 and 606 King street was begun yesterday by the Globe Wrecking Co., of Chicago, to clear the site for the erection of a modern building for the S. S. Kresge Co. The razing will be completed by Tuesday.

Funeral services for Sergt. Parker Cole, U. S. A., retired, were held yesterday at his home on the Alexandria-Fort Humphreys road by Lieut. Col. Wood, of Fort Humphreys. Interment followed in Arlington National Cemetery with military honors. Masonic rites were conducted at the gave.

Tobacco Growers May Hold Crops

Association Urges Them Not to Rush Product to Auction Floors.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—Tobacco growers in Eastern North Carolina, middle belt and old belt areas were urged not to rush their crops to the auction floors in letters sent from the offices of the Tobacco Association of the United States, located here. The purpose is to have the auction season extended, it was stated.

The season extension movement, which was given form in a resolution passed at the recent convention of the association, intends to do away with hasty trading under conditions which tend to force erratic prices.

Buying agencies are requested to keep men on the floors until the crop is disposed of. The movement is said to have the approval of buyers and warehousemen and will eliminate the necessity for curtailed purchases due to congested conditions in buyers' redrying plants.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 3 (A.P.).—With indications that practically all the large commercial apple growers in the Winchester district would sign up for State inspection this season, it was estimated that the number of barrels to be inspected would exceed 80,000, the number passed on last year by State officials.

Virginia law forbids the shipment of apples and like fruits in closed packages unless containers bear the name and quality of the fruit.
